U.S. Will Keep the Seas Free, Roosevelt Says; 14 Launchings Begin

'Liberty World-Wide' Is America's Pledge, President Says on 'Liberty Fleet' Day

President Roosevelt, forcefully reasserting America's gravely challenged freedom of the seas doctrine, early today warned the Axis that ships of the expanding United States Merchant Marine will sail the seas "as they are intended to"—protected to the limit of this Government's ability against torpedo, shell or bomb.

With a prediction that there shall be "no death for America, for democracy or for freedom," the President declared that this Government's pledge to all mankind is to guarantee "world-wide, eternal liberty."

Deplores "Gospel of Fear"

The Chief Executive simultaneously condemned as rankly dishonest the proposals of those "few Americans" who, he said, preach a gospel of fear by claiming to favor freedom of the seas in principle while urging that American ships be kept tied up in port, safe from hostile attack.

"That attitude is neither truthful nor honest," he said.

The assertions of the President, made in a recorded address highlighting the launchings of 14 new United States cargo ships on the Nation's three coasts on this Liberty Fleet Day," prefaced expected Congressional action upon the Administration's demands for repeal or revision of the Neutrality Act to permit arming of United States merchantmen and their passage into the war zones.

Referring to the mass launchings in 14 ports, largest combined launchings since the first World War, the President said:

"We propose that these ships sail the seas as they are intended to. We propose, to the best of our ability, to protect them from torpedo, from shell or from bomb.

"The Patrick Henry, as one of the liberty ships launched today renews that great patriot's stirring demand: 'Give me liberty or give me death.'

"Liberty . . . Eternal"

"There shall be no death for America, for democracy, for freedom. There must be liberty, world-wide and eternal. That is our prayer—our pledge to all mankind."

Mr. Roosevelt commended America's shipbuilders for doing a "great job," with speed and efficiency. He said the entire Nation must catch the spirit of these laborers "if Hitler and other aggressors of his ilk are to be prevented from crushing us."

The shipworkers, Mr. Roosevelt added, "struck 14 such blows today," against the Axis menace, one for each ship launched.

Freedom of the seas and America's resulting commerce throughout its history has been a major reason for the Nation's prosperity, the President said, not only on the coasts but in the interior, "far from salt water and shipbuilding," as well.

Eight Pages Of Sports

With tomorrow's issue the Sunday Post's peach paper sports section goes up to eight pages devoted exclusively to sports news, pictures, and comment. Fish Admits His Office Sent Truck to Take Evidence Away

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, admitted yesterday that his office sent the Congressional truck which hauled away 20 mailbags of evidence in the District grand jury's Nazi agent inquiry, but Fish said he personally had nothing to do with it.

In fact, Fish said, he never heard of the mailbags until a Post reporter asked him about them.

Ten of the mailbags were traced to the America First Committee, which turned them over Thursday to United States deputy marshals armed with a subpena.

At least six more of the mailbags are locked up in storage compartments of the House Office Building. Fish said the Department of Justice could have these "any time they want to ask for them." Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey said they would do so immediately, probably today.

The Department of Justice "propaganda squad" launched the current grand jury investigation of suspected German agents on September 16, with Flanders Hall, Inc., of Scotch Plains, N. J., their chief target.

A week later, Frank B. Burch, Akron, Ohio, isolationist and Republican leader, was indicted on charges of not registering as an agent of the German government and Prescott Dennett was hailed before Justice Jesse C. Adkins for contempt of court action.

Dennett is manager of Columbia Press Service, 1430 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, and secretary of the Make Europe Pay and Islands for War Debts Committees. After Maloney charged in open court that "known German agents" gave these groups money," Justice Adkins ordered Dennett to turn all his records over to the grand jury.

Dennett did so that afternoon, without mentioning that last Friday morning, a few hours after he was served with the grand jury summons, he got rid of 20 mailbags full of material. He did give up bales of unused postage-free envelopes which originally were issued to members of the House and Senate for official use.

5-Point Plan Adopted to Cut Traffic Toll

Safety Islands, Shift In Bus Stops, Curb On Trucks Included

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Five of the most far-reaching steps yet evolved for solution of Washington's "immediate" traffic problem yesterday received unanimous indorsement of the Commissioners.

Following a two-hour round-table conference with their police and traffic heads, the Commissioners announced official approval of:

Plans to experiment with a change in traffic light timing to speed up the flow of vehicles and relieve rush-hour congestion.

A proposal to shift bus stops to the far side of all intersections, preventing traffic jams and hazards at the approach sides.

A program of safety zone replacements — eliminating the present yellow painted zones and installing raised, concrete platforms to provide adequate protection for pedestrians.

A ban on the loading and unloading of commercial vehicles on principal thoroughfares during peak hours.

Proposals to increase the present force of 56 motorcycle men to 100 men.

Young Optimistic

At conclusion of the meeting, Commissioner John Russell Young said the city heads felt "greatly encouraged" over prospects of improving traffic evils. The police and traffic chiefs, he said, spoke frankly and "let down their hair."

Movie Probe Episode Ends Like Old Serial

Feuds Are Raging With Anger, Denials; Plot Still Unsolved

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The Senate subcommittee investigating war propaganda charges against Hollywood last night adjourned for 10 days after a wild session marked by angry charges and denials of race prejudice on the part of British agencies in Washington and new bitterness in the feud between Senator McFarland (Democrat), of Arizona, and the subcommittee's isolationist majority.

Allegations of war propaganda in the movies were discussed, intermittently, during testimony by Darryl Zanuck, vice president of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Barney Balaban, head of Paramount.

A capacity crowd in the Caucus Room of the Senate Office Building applauded and booed at will, as Chairman Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, vainly rapped for order with a heavy glass ash tray.

Touches Off Fireworks

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, touched off the loudest of the day's fireworks with an effort to prove the charge, which he had reported at Thursday's session, that the British Purchasing Mission in Washington refuses to hire Americans of German, Jewish or Irish ancestry.

The New England isolationist's "key witness" was Mrs. Charlotte Oehman, in charge of the placement of girls trained by the Boyd Secretarial School, of Washington.

Mrs. Oehman, when questioned by Tobey, stated that the British

Windsors Leave for Canada; Will Revisit D. C. in November

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor waved an affectionate farewell to Washington yesterday and headed northwestward for the long journey to the Duke's 4,000-acre ranch near Calgary, Alberta Province, Canada.

There, besides transacting some business, the duke will hark back to an old passion—horseback riding. Years ago, when he was Prince of Wales, he had to abandon the sport because the British public, alarmed by the "Prince Thrown Again" headlines, was afraid he would break his royal neck.

The duke and duchess are coming back this way late in November, and they will then be the luncheon guests of President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House. A luncheon scheduled in their honor Thursday was postponed because of the death of Mrs. Roosevelt's brother, G. Hall Roosevelt.

On the way to Chicago, the Pennsylvania train bearing the ducal party stopped at Baltimore, the duchess' home town. The former Wallis Warfield had not forgotten it. Standing on the rear platform with the man who gave up the British crown to marry her, she pointed out places of interest near the depot.

An hour or so before the party left Washington, the duke, on the spur of the moment, halted his party at the Lincoln Memorial. He gazed at the big Grecian temple, saw the Washington Monument reflected in the pool at its base, read

Profit Limit Won't Work, Nelson Says

Sees It as Damper On Defense Output; Promises Small Firms To Ease Priorities

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Donald M. Nelson, executive secretary of the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, yesterday promised relief to small business from priorities "uncertainties" and opposed a 6 per cent ceiling on all business profits.

Nelson said Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's proposal to limit all profits to 6 per cent on invested capital might discourage production at a time when a maximum effort is needed.

Testifying that "small business has been hurt more than it should have been" by the present system of preference priorities, the former Sears-Roebuck vice president said allocation of raw materials may have to be substituted to keep non-defense plants in operation and supply defense needs as well.

Opposes Baruch's Plan

Nelson, only three weeks in his SPAB job, appeared before the House Banking Committee to urge prompt passage of the Administration bill for selective control of prices on principal commodities to avert "an inflationary period that will completely destroy us." He opposed the over-all price ceiling plan of Bernard Baruch because "no man would be capable of administering it."

Secretary Morgenthau's plan for 100 per cent taxes on all profits over 6 per cent on invested capital, suggested Wednesday as a supplement to price control, he likewise opposed because "it would take away some of the incentive to produce."

"I think this is a time when the Nation needs every ounce of effort," he added under questioning.

Excess Rates Limit

Nelson said he agreed that present excess profits tax rates are "probably" not high enough and there should be some limit on profits as "we don't want to see exorbitant profits made in this emergency." But he said he thought the profit system had to have an incentive to make it work.

Subjected to day-long questioning by the House Banking Committee, as members were besieged with protests from small business firms claiming lack of defense business and of supplies, Nelson said enough consideration has not been given to small and medium sized manufacturers in placing defense contracts but "I am sure the problem is going to be solved. It must be solved."

The SPAB secretary said no more than 20 per cent of those companies making straight civilian goods can be changed over to production of straight defense goods because of their set-ups and lack of machinery.

"But don't get the impression that materials will be so scarce that the 20 per cent will have to go out of business," the witness said. "Some

13 Nazi Divisions Repulsed at Bryansk With 20,000 Men Lost, Russians Say

By International News Service

Moscow (Saturday), Sept. 27. Three gigantic German offensives, with four Nazi armies and all types of equipment taking part, have been turned back 220 miles southwest of Moscow at a cost of 20,000 Nazi casualties, Soviet reports said today.

Another triple offensive on the Leningrad front reportedly was shattered by Russian troops and a huge civilian army of women and men, while the Red forces rolled back the Nazis for an additional five miles in one sector at the northern city.

Saturday's midnight communique was as the usual:

"Our troops engaged the enemy along the entire front."

It added that "118 German planes were destroyed Wednesday; we lost 29."

Chancellor Hitler gave personal orders to throw some of Germany's crack units into repeated offensives aimed to smash the Red lines along the Desna River in the Bryansk sector and push onwards for Moscow, the official Communist party newspaper Izvestia said.

At one time the Desna actually was crossed, but finally elite German mechanized troops were turned back and thousands were added to the Nazi death toll, Izvestia said.

Details of the futile campaign against Moscow were told in a dispatch in Izvestia by Gen. Ananev, who reported from the front that "scores of villages" have been recaptured since the German drive against Bryansk was halted.

The chief German army, he said, was headed by Col. Gen. Heinz Guderian, famous for breakthroughs in Poland and northern France. In addition the forces of Generals Gudt, Lemelsen, and Polstenstern took part.

Used 13 Divisions

The German forces originally grouped for the drive against Roslavl (northwest of Bryansk) and Bryansk, thence in the direction of Moscow, comprised four mechanized, four tank, and five infantry divisions, with air support.

Gen. Ananev said when the initial move against Bryansk failed, the enemy moved its main mass to the south, and tried again from the direction of Poceps, southwest of Bryansk, "but lost thousands of men when the maneuver failed."

Gen. Guderian then transferred his men still further south, and tried to rush Bryansk from three directions, Izvestia went on, but the Red lines held firm against the triple assault.

Then the Russians opened a counter attack, scoring a "brilliant victory" in the Trubchevsk section 55 miles south of Bryansk, while further gains were made in the

British Moves Hint Offensive To Help Soviets Is in Offing

By Edward W. Beattie, Jr.
United Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 26.—Indications were seen tonight that Britain and her Allies might be preparing a major move to aid Russia's fight, which already is consuming so many men that Germany is reported asking pro-Axis nations for 1,000,000 more soldiers.

Amid a flurry of round-about reports and obscure diplomatic moves these facts stood out:

The Exchange Telegraph carried an Ankara dispatch saying Germany was trying to raise armies of 150,000 Hungarians, 100,000 Rumanians, 150,000 Bulgarians, 500,000 Italians and 100,000 Slovakians to relieve weary and hard-pressed German troops in Russia.

Invasion Deemed Essential

[According to the Associated Press, Lieut. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, general officer commanding the Canadian Corps in England, told a group of visiting Canadian editors tonight "there will have to be an invasion of the continent."]

A political and military alliance between the Free French and Russia was signed here by the Russian Ambassador, Ivan Maisky, and Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Nazis Commandeer Norway's Blankets; Kiev Area Captives Raised to 574,000

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 26.—The German nation was informed by word and deed tonight that the high command expects a winter campaign in the East, even as a new official reckoning put the toll of the Ukrainian Red army entrapment at 574,000 prisoners and said the total was "still growing."

The official news agency, D.N.B., said that the Russians, by counter-attacks, now were testing the German front to find out where the next offensive thrusts might be expected, and added:

"Although the advance already has gone far, it is generally recognized that one cannot figure on German pressure against the Soviet armies letting up during the winter months."

Norse Blankets Commandeered

At the same time dispatches from German-occupied Oslo told of a decree by which Norwegians must surrender wool blankets for use by the Germany army. Civilians and stores possessing such blankets must deliver them up by September 30, on pain of prison sentences up to three years and heavy fines. Certain exceptions were made for persons living in northernmost areas and for areas hard-hit by war. The blankets will be paid for on a basis of German army appraisal.

Sources other than the high command tonight reported the repulse of Russian tank-supported counter-attacks in the north sector Thursday, with six tanks destroyed; silencing of certain Russian naval guns in Leningrad Harbor and at Kronstadt by German planes which set the ships were trying to land troops and material; destruction of 86 Russian planes on the entire front Thursday.

For days the Germans have been reporting the steady destruction of four Russian armies, contained in two German pockets east of fallen Kiev.

Booty "Incalculable"

Tonight's special communique said this destruction was nearly complete with 574,000 prisoners in hand and as yet incalculable booty. The figure represented the greatest total of prisoners yet claimed in one offensive.

Other German sources, dealing with the continuing fighting from Moscow south, said the German armies and air squadrons had dealt a telling blow to Russian rail and road systems.

These systems are most dense in the conquered Ukrainian areas west and southwest of Kharkov, toward which the Ukrainian advance now is pounding.

Many terminals of west-east Russian railroads now are in German hands, spokesmen said, and "it remains to be seen how the Russians will solve the transportation problem on the north and south rail lines." Roads in the zone of operations were described as poor.

Red Attacks Repulsed

With air squadrons relentlessly pounding the rail facilities of the Kharkov area, news agency reports said German and Allied troops had made additional territorial gains in the south, repulsing counterattacks in which the Russians used both cavalry and tanks.

The air bombardments were said to have already destroyed railway tracks and armament plants from Moscow to Kharkov,

Lend-Aid Bill Given House Right of Way

Any Neutrality Act Change Must Wait, Leaders Decide

The President's new $5,985,000,000 lend-lease bill yesterday received the legislative right-of-way over any neutrality law action as a House Appropriations Subcommittee closed the first week of hearings on the urgent aid measure.

OPM Director William S. Knudsen, still calling for "more and still more" defense production, and Chairman Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission, pledging peak efforts to overcome vast shipping losses, joined the long line of witnesses for the aid bill.

Knudsen told the House subcommittee that four billion dollars of the new aid funds, directly under the purview of the OPM, could be converted into defense goods and delivered within the July 1, 1943, time limit.

25 Per Cent of All Ships Sunk

Land advised the subcommittee that between 13 and 14 million tons of commercial shipping of all countries have been sunk since the outbreak of the war or about 25 per cent of the world tonnage existing when the conflict broke out.

Both Senate and House foreign affairs spokesmen meanwhile disclosed that "nothing will be done" either to revise or repeal the 1939 Neutrality Act until the lend-lease bill clears Congress, but modifications Control Board, President that.

Senator McKellar, (Democrat), of Tennessee, surprised Congress by presenting a resolution for outright repeal Thursday, but said he was "on his own" and it was not

Hunter Plans 10% Increase In WPA Wages

Predicts Additions To Rolls This Winter Owing to Priorities

A plan to raise the wages of more than 1,000,000 Work Projects Administration workers by approximately 10 per cent was announced yesterday by Howard O. Hunter, WPA commissioner.

He said at a press conference that the reason back of the proposed increase of wages is the increased cost of living.

The District's approximately 5000 WPA workers would get raises of $8.20 to $9.49 a month under a general 10 per cent increase.

Officials Await Notification

The scale of WPA wages in Washington, as high as in any city of the country, runs from $52 to $94.90 a month.

District WPA officials said they had received no official notification of wage increases.

The plan is in the study stage, he said, and will affect approximately 1,084,629 workers. Some action was predicted within 30 days by the commissioner.

5,300,000 Unemployed

At the same time Hunter prophesied that WPA rolls would increase this winter because of "priorities unemployment." This type of unemployment has become increasingly apparent of late. Shortage of materials, such as metals needed by defense plants, has forced the closing down of hundreds and perhaps thousands of plants which have not been able to get defense contracts.

Hunter estimated that 5,300,000 persons were not employed at present. He looked forward to a decline

Orphans of Defense

Mansfield Is Penalized Now For Peacetime Efficiency

This is the fifth of a series of articles on industrial centers which are threatened with depression in the midst of a booming economy because their raw materials are being diverted to defense manufactures.

By Alfred Friendly
(Copyright by The Washington Post)

Mansfield, Ohio, Sept. 26.—The cards are stacked against this little city's major industries.

The raw materials that feed its machines are exactly those which the defense program needs and is now pre-empting. The machines themselves, however, are exactly those which the defense program does not want.

Against heavy odds, Mansfield is putting up a real fight.

"We aren't licked yet by a damn' sight," they tell you here.

Mansfield can win out in this uphill struggle. But to do it, the drive and ingenuity of its factory managers must be matched by equal effort on the part of the Government in routing defense contracts to the consumers' goods factories here. Otherwise Mansfield will change from Boom Town to Depression Hollow in a matter of months.

In the heart of Ohio's rolling farm lands, Mansfield has from 50 to 60 different factories. Despite this number and variety, the community is known as a "Westinghouse town." More than 5000 of its 13,000 factory workers draw their pay from the huge Westinghouse plant. As goes Westinghouse, so goes the town.

Up to now, Westinghouse has been going great guns. Employment was at boom levels, because the demand for the refrigerators, dish washers, sinks, ranges, fans, electric cleaners, ironers and other household appliances which this plant, alone of all Westinghouse factories, turns out.

Making similar products, that is, durable consumers goods, are several other Mansfield factories, with the result that at least half of the town's factory workers are dependent for livelihood on the sale of household appliances.

This community is by no means alone in facing the problem of scarce metal supplies. For "Mansfield" read Long Island City, N. Y.; Greenville, Muskegon or Grand Rapids, Mich.; Belleville or Quincy, Ill.; Evansville, Ind., or dozens more cities making "less essential" but metal-consuming civilian products.

The blow of priorities has already been felt here. Westinghouse officials decline to estimate how many layoffs there have been, but the

Vichy 'Collaborates'

3 Frenchmen Are Guillotined By Order of New State Court

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Sept. 26.—Three Frenchmen died by the guillotine today in the courtyard of Sante Prison in Paris, condemned by a new tribunal of state which was set up to show the Germans that the French themselves can crush prolonged unrest from a hidden opposition.

The three, all formerly identified with French communism, were Adolphe Guyot, once the Communist leader of the Seine (Paris) department; Jacques Woog and Former Deputy Jean Cathelas.

The tribunal is expected to issue new condemnations shortly, among them the former Communist Deputy Gabriel Peri, whose case is believed already decided. Another under death sentence, Fresco Fosgardi, remains at large.

All those sentenced so far by the tribunal of state were convicted in secret sessions for fomenting or organizing disorders. Those guillotined today were the first it had sentenced to death.

Through the operations of this court, which is separate from anti-communist tribunals also operating in Paris and elsewhere, the Vichy government hopes to curb the spread of German reprisals against French hostages for attacks on Germans and other manifestations of opposition.

Pierre Pucheu, Vichy's dynamic minister of the interior, is in Paris trying to sell the Germans on the idea for stopping these reprisals—which already have cost 35 lives—until the new French courts can

Germans Reported Halted in Crimea

By International News Service

London (Saturday), Sept. 27.—Stopped by Russian land mines, air bombardments and counterattacks in their 48-hour attempt to break through the narrow Perekop Isthmus, bottleneck of the Crimea, Germany's armies today were reported to be throwing greater masses of air-borne troops into the attack.

Dispatches reaching London newspapers from Stockholm and through British military channels said there was "no evidence" that Nazi parachutists have yet succeeded in taking any positions in their desperate attempt to convert the Crimea into "another Crete."

(The midnight communique of the Russians referring to Crimean operations confined itself to the statement: "German parachutists attempting a large-scale operation against the Crimea were successfully prevented from doing any further damage.")

Mowed Down by Thousands

[German troops storming the approaches to the Crimea have been mowed down by the thousands, Soviet war dispatches said, according to the Associated Press.]

All the way from the Crimean Peninsula to the central Russian front, the London Daily Express said in a Stockholm dispatch, a gigantic fight for the Crimea and the Donets River basin is in "full swing."

The Express said 70,000 German motorized and mechanized troops are trying to batter their way down the Perekop Isthmus.

Landings, it was believed, may be attempted from the Black Sea fleet which the Axis powers have massed—landings such as were carried out only with heavy losses in the British and Allied attacks on Russia in the Crimean war of the last century.

Surrounded by Mine Fields

Following mass raids of Stuka dive-bombers, the Express account related:

"Hundreds of German tanks went into action, but Russian artillery sealed the approaches to the isthmus, and Russian troops repelled the attackers. The Germans suffered heavy losses in men and materials.

"The whole zone is surrounded by gigantic mine fields, on which whole German battalions reportedly were exterminated . . .

"Meanwhile, the Russians are counterattacking along the Germans' northern flank from Perekop westward towards Kherson, where the enemy establihsed bridgeheads on the Dnieper."

London Expects British Offensive

as many as 200,000 men eventually, was announced by Dr. Josef Retinger, political adviser to the Polish government in exile here.

The return home of Capt. Oliver Lyttleton, British minister in charge of Middle Eastern affairs, from his post in Cairo, was revealed by authoritative sources. His visit, presumably for conferences, closely followed the disclosure that Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, commander of the British Indian army holding the junction with Russian troops in Iran, had been home for secret conferences.

[Gen. Wavell, according to an Associated Press dispatch, was understood to be en route to Teheran, the capital of Iran, for a conference with Col. T. Novikov, Russian commander.]

Diplomats Busy

Other diplomatic moves were the arrival of Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal representative at the Vatican, to visit United States Ambassador John G. Winant before he returns home; the departure of Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, and Lady Halifax, for Washington by airplane after a visit in England; the announcement that Sir Samuel Hoare, British Ambassador to Spain, was en route here.

[Lord Halifax landed at Lisbon in a British overseas plane late today and will board a transatlantic clipper for New York tomorrow, the Associated Press said.]

Although observers did not connect the movements of Taylor, Halifax and Hoare with the Russian situation directly, they were part of the brisk general activity indicating that Britain was preparing for something spectacular in the Middle East soon.

Reports have persisted, although most of them came from pro-Axis sources, that Britain was sending troops to the Russian Caucasus to help defend the oil fields there. British authorities have not confirmed or denied them.

"Dagger Pointed at Berlin"

[Gen. McNaughton told the Canadian newspapermen in a significant interview at his headquarters somewhere in England, according to the Associated Press, that the Canadian Corps "is a dagger pointed at the heart of Berlin—don't make any mistake about this."

[These troops, he went on, are on call for "useful service," and the only qualification is that there be a useful objective and a proper time for action.

["I dont think you can bring a proud and well-organized nation to her knees with missiles alone," McNaughton said in predicting the continental invasion.

[There is no better located spot than England, he went on, for an offensive action along the coast of Europe from Gibraltar to Spitzbergen.

[He conceded, however, that a British invasion of the continent may not be attempted until after Germany tries to invade the British Isles.]

Caucasus Move Foreseen

Other sources here believe that the much hoped-for British "second front" might now be established—not in western Europe but in the southeast—and that British forces poured into it will relieve Russians for action on the north Russian front. These sources pointed out that the growing reserves of Indian troops in the Middle East would be best suited to fighting in the Caucasus, where the terrain is not unlike that of India.

(Benito Mussolini's Milan newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, said Gen. Wavell had 500,000 men equipped with United States material ready to "protect British interests in the Middle East," according to a United Press dispatch from Rome.)

(A United Press Stockholm dispatch quoted the newspaper Social Demokraten's Istanbul Correspondent that Wavell was hurriedly forming an expeditionary force to defend the Baku oil fields and that airplanes, tanks and armored cars were flowing across Iran to the Caucasus.)

have a chance to get things under control.

In Vichy itself, a flurry of scattered activity indicated to some observers that something was brewing. Some of its manifestations:

1. A conference between Vice Premier Jean Darlan and German Embassy Secretary Rahn, who came to Vichy from his new post on the Nazi diplomatic staff in Paris. Rahn was invited to dine tonight with Chief of State Petain.

Jacques Benoist-Mechin, former Vichy secretary of State and regarded as a leading advocate of collaboration, came here with Rahn, and authorized circles said he brought along preliminary proposals for "marked resumption" of French-German negotiations.

2. A round of conferences here by Gen. Henri Dentz over the disposition of the troops who were defeated under his command in the Syrian War with the British and De Gaullists. It is now believed these troops will remain in France, rather than go to African garrisons.

3. Gen. Koelz, newly named to the command of Vichy forces in Algeria, started his tour of duty by inspecting the important garrison of Blida, south of Algiers.

neighborhood of Znow and Novovasiliev.

Nevertheless the Germans succeeded in pushing part of a mechanized division across the Desna River, but, Gen. Ananev said, the Soviets "hurled back the enemy and left thousands of Nazi dead on the river banks."

Red army forces then followed up this success with another counterdrive, while the left Russian flank in the region of Poceps "pounded the Guderian army and other German forces."

Following this series of German reverses, during which the Germans lost 20,000 men killed or wounded, a majority of the German divisions were removed to the rear, Gen. Ananev said.

Report Baltic Isles Held

A broadcast from Leningrad today insisted that the fortified islands of Dagoe and Oesel, off the coast of Estonia at the entrance of the Gulf of Finland, "are proving impregnable to German attacks."

Fifteen thousand Germans—40 to 50 per cent of the forces which attacked the islands—have been wiped out, the Leningrad radio asserted.

A supplement to the Saturday Moscow day communique said: "Additional information concerning routing of the Thirteenth and Fifteenth Rumanian Infantry Divisions near Odessa Wednesday reveals that 2000 Rumanians were killed and between 5000 and 6000 wounded or taken prisoner. Thirty-three guns, including several long-range pieces, six tanks, 39 mine-throwers, 4000 shells, 110 machine guns, and 15,000 mines were captured.

"Five hundred officers and men were killed in fighting yesterday on the central front.

"Bombers destroyed an enemy air field and 50 airplanes in the western direction of the front Wednesday, also set afire a munitions dump."

Leningrad Outposts Retaken

Four more, strategically located villages in the Leningrad area have fallen back into the hands of the Soviets, the Red Star said.

(A British radio message from Vichy said the Germans still were fighting at Tsarskoe Selo, ten miles south of Leningrad, "where in 1917 the White Russian advance on the city was finally held."

(The dispatch added that in the Bay of Kronstadt, the old Russian battleships Marat and October Revolution are shelling German positions west of Peterhof, about 20 miles from Leningrad. Berlin earlier this week reported that the Marat was sunk and the October Revolution put out of commission. The Germans themselves reported the shelling by the ships Thursday.

(Diplomatic advices in Rome said that the Russian counterattacks around Leningrad were so strong that fall of the city is "not imminent." The Soviets were reported by Rome to be rushing reinforcements to the Kharkov and Sea of Azov regions, where the Red defenses have stiffened greatly.)

Canadians Seize Nazi Staff in Raid on France

New York, Sept 26 (U.P.)—Private advices from occupied France said today that Canadian forces had raided the north coast of France and seized 28 German officers, including most of the staff of a German division.

The Germans were seized as they slept in villas on the Brittany coast. The raiders also obtained some military documents, the advices said.

The Canadians were said to have crossed the Channel in small boats and to have rowed ashore with definite objectives. Each group went to its objective and within half an hour the job was done and the 28 startled and angry prisoners on their way to a prison camp in England.

Napoleon vs. Hitler

Napoleon's horse and buggy legions traveled the road to Moscow in exactly 85 days. Hitler's mechanized army is still on route after three months. This is a birds-eye view of the two trips, one in 1812, the other in 1941.

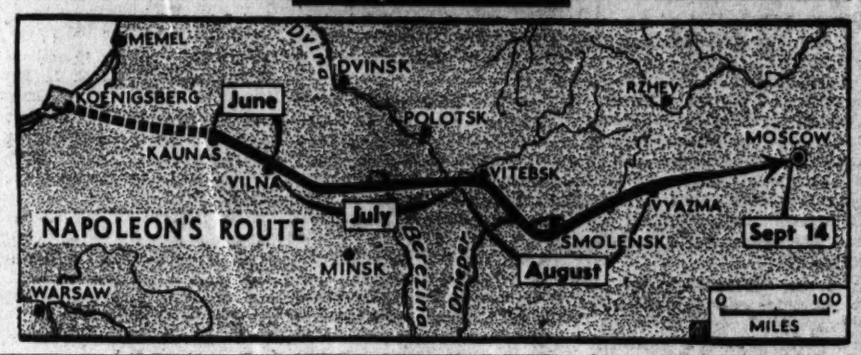
Napoleon's international army, paced by the cream of French forces, fought 50 miles into Russia, reaching the city of Vilna.	June	The legions of Adolf Hitler, striking hard on the road to Moscow, moved 150 miles eastward at blitz pace in 8 days.
Two columns moved perceptibly toward Moscow, one fighting at Vilna, the other battling defenders on the southern flank.	July 1-15	German penetration on the central front, the road to Moscow, reached 350 miles. Russians drew on huge reserves.
French legions pulled on seven league boots, battled toward Moscow to a point more than 275 miles inside the frontier.	July 16-31	The central spearhead reached the Smolensk sector, 400 miles inside Russia, against steadily-increasing Soviet resistance.
With one-third of his army lost, Napoleon reached Smolensk's outskirts and began a desperate battle for the city.	August 1-15	Past Smolensk moved the Nazis but their blitz had begun to lose its sting. To the north a spearhead neared Leningrad.
Smolensk went up in flames before the French army. Russian troops broke into a hurried and disorganized retreat.	August 16-31	A see-saw battle beyond Smolensk continued. Russians recaptured large sections of territory stained with blood.
Napoleon, checked briefly at Borodino, smashed on to Moscow, soon captured the city. He found it burned and useless.	September	The German army, gobbling up ground in the Ukraine, hit a stone wall on the front before Moscow, stopped in its tracks.



Exile Looms For Million Serb Rebels

By International News Service

Rome, Sept. 26.—Stern repressive measures, possibly including mass banishment of an estimated 1,500,000 Serbians, were predicted tonight by a foreign office spokesman as Italy and Germany moved to quell mounting anti-Axis outbreaks in that part of conquered Yugoslavia designated as the Kingdom of Croatia.

Some rearrangement, such as an exchange of populations, may be necessary to replace the "hasty preliminary" arrangements in the Balkans, this spokesman asserted.

His assertion followed within a day of Italian military reoccupation of a previously demilitarized zone extending through old Bosnia, Herzegoina, Croatia and Slovania and stretching from the Adriatic coast to the Alps.

14 Reported Killed

At the same time, the Italian newspaper La Tribuna in a dispatch from Belgrade announced that 14 members of armed bands had been killed in the Sava Valley of old Serbia by Serbian armed forces striving to put down the uprisings. Ten others were said to have been captured.

(A British radio broadcast picked up in New York by C. B. S. stated that 443 Italians have been convicted of sabotaging war materials. The London broadcaster also asserted that a special court martial recently was established in Milan, main Italian industrial center, to try a number of people for various offenses.)

The newspaper Tevere added anti-Semitic attacks to the general denunciation of anti-Axis groups with the charge that the Jewish community in Rome is ruled by enemies of Italy. The paper charged the Jews with being pro-British, anti-Fascist and defeatist, and urged that all Jewish communities be broken up and an end put to their activities, regardless of rank and title.

The attack concluded with the statement that permission for Jews to hold divine services must not become an alibi for anti-Fascist machinations on their part.

center of the industrial Donets besin.

There were no reports of today's hostilities in the siege of Leningrad, although German infantry units were said to have occupied two towns in a northern sector yesterday while reconnaissance troops took a third locality and reached the shore of a lake. Firing from this shore, the Germans were declared to have destroyed two boats filled with Russian troops.

Six other small vessels were reported destroyed in northern waters.

On Red Front . . . Life, Death, War, Harvest Walk Together

By C. L. Sulzberger

With the Red Army on the Central Front, Sept. 23 (delayed).—The Russian front looks like this. These are leaves from a note book:

"First birch and evergreen forests; much second growth; cold like late November in New York. . . . occasional truck convoys bearing small arms ammunition.

"After the macadam road ends squads of workers are keeping up the dirt highway; men and women peasant laborers; steamrollers; piles of earth interspersed along the sides for surfacing; intermittent sentries and patrols.

"Much rain recently has left the ground soggy and dotted with puddles; cold breeze; dull sky overcast with clouds . . . little villages of unpainted houses built of logs and thatched roofs . . . Breakfast in a birch grove and whitebread, cheese, butter, sausage, tinned sturgeon. . . . It begins to drizzle.

"Cattle, sheep and goats peacefully grazing together . . . six wagons piled with hay and drawn by two horses, each driven by soldiers, pass westward.

Sentries on Watch

"All bridges guarded by sentries . . . Trucks rumbling to the front loaded with food and winter uniforms. . . . Wheat fields and rye fields harvested; flax cut and bound in sheaves which remain on the fields, . . . Ochre, tan, gray, dark green, and brown landscape; unpainted houses; windmill; magpies and crows.

"Occasional churches with squat vegetable steeples poke out from tree . . . near the front soldiers helping women with the harvest . . . Helmeted soldiers driving a procession of tractors down the road; ambulance overtakes them. . . . 222-millimeter guns hauled by tractors move down the road accompanied by soldiers bearing spades.

"Truck stations hidden in the trees off the road. . . . Cavalry and artillery horses grazing by a herd of swine. . . . Huge piles of logs by a railroad station. . . . Horsedrawn carts hauling small tanks of oil.

"Lunch on caviar, smoked salmon, tinned sprats, tomatoes, bread, vodka, brandywine, bortsch, beer, meat, vegetables and a hote compote in a small town beside a hospital from which soldiers, covered with bandages, peer over the wall.

"Deep bomb craters near a warehouse; the colonel says that German air prisoners state 'we have lost many of our experienced pilots over London and Crete' . . . many officers carry mausers in wooden holsters.

"A V-formation of fighters hums overhead . . . a light tank rattles down the road . . . with bayonets fixed helmeted soldiers are herding cattle near the front lines . . . a stranded light tank in the road with both caterpillars busted . . . netted antiaircraft guns by the roadside . . . women harvesting grain.

"Villages almost deserted save for soldiers . . . supply wagons winding out of the forest and driven by pipe-smoking soldiers . . . an army cooperation plane hops over the hilltop . . . the Germans are running short of tanks in the Yartesvo salient and are no longer trying to break through there.

"After the bombing of a village a tough tank major says 'I can't look at the dead children. I always think of my daughter' . . . oil trucks bearing boughs aloft move down the road . . . smiling soldiers emerge from the woods carrying strings of mushrooms.

Ambulances in Haste

"Squads of workers by the roadside in charge of armed guards . . . ambulances hurry toward the rear . . . Cavalry troop waters horses in a brook . . . A camouflaged antiaircraft battery . . . trucks riddled with bullet holes . . . helmeted cavalry troopers riding along at a walk . . . peasant girls scrubbing clothes in a stream while planes cruise overhead . . . A light tank hidden in a clump of trees beside a bough-decked antitank gun. "Although the village is within artillery range flower gardens, behind huts are kept patched; laundry hanging on a line; machine-gun holes in the walls.

"The German positions are in sight across the river from the wood-clustered road . . . morale near the fighting zone better than at Moscow.

"Traversing a field pitted with shell holes . . . the blazed trail in the woods avoids the regular road which is a terrible soup of mud . . . Intermittent pounding of Russian batteries . . . Infantry and tank soldiers sitting around a salient in a forest; rifle fire echoes through the trees."

Soviet Secrecy Delaying Full Aid to Russia

By Frank L. Kluckhohn
Copyright by New York Times

Full-scale American aid to Russia is being delayed by the difficulty of obtaining from the Moscow government "full knowledge" of the Russian position, which President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill insisted in their joint message to Premier Josef Stalin was the prerequisite to the proper supplying of needs, several informed officials said today.

They asserted that British and American observers still were not permitted to visit any but isolated parts of the Russian front.

Diplomatic sources insist there are no signs whatsoever of Premier Stalin's weakening in his determination to fight to a finish with Germany. Some official quarters here assert that by not permitting observation at the front the Soviet premier appears reluctant to put all of his eggs into the Anglo-American basket and is leaving the way open for negotiations with Germany if he cares to undertake them.

Washington hopes that the Anglo-American delegation now in Moscow will be able to arrange for the sending of adequate observers to Russian army headquarters and fronts, to inspect Soviet arms factories freely and to see the confidential reports of the Soviet government.

Although the formal conference in Moscow has not yet started, informal talks have been proceeding, thus far without the release of the type of information sought by American and British delegates headed by W. Averell Harriman and Lord Beaverbrook.

Premier Stalin, officials say, has promised to "tell all" in the Moscow conference and so it is expected that this log-jam will be broken as soon as formal negotiations about meeting the Soviet supply problem begins. Meanwhile, officials said, Britain and the United States have failed to release most secret defense implements to Russia.

Lend-Aid Bill Gets Right of Way

the Administration bill.

No final decision has been made on whether the Administration will propose a complete repealer or a modification, salvaging such features as authorization for the Munitions control board. President Roosevelt recently indicated he would make that decision next week. Strategically, leaders generally were agreed on postponing action until the lend-lease bill leads the way.

As the House Appropriations deficiencies subcommittee closed lend-lease hearings for the week, Chairman Cannon said Secretary of War Stimson and high Army officials will testify Monday and the hearings close on Tuesday. The balance of the week will be taken on a quarter of a million in deficiency estimates expected to be added to the bill.

Testimony Withheld

Testimony by Knudson and Land of a confidential nature was withheld by the committee which issued a brief statement summing up the picture presented by the two officials.

"Mr. Knudson gave the subcommittee a picture of the orders already placed with industry for all national defense and lend-lease purposes," said the statement. "He was frank in saying that he was not satisfied with the progress of production. In saying this, he did not mean to indicate that progress was not going according to schedule but rather that as a production official he was of such a temperament that he was never satisfied with the speed of delivery."

Admiral Land, the statement said, explained that the $850,000,000 allocation in the bill for the Maritime Commission, was for "maintenance, operations, repairs and charter hire of commercial vessels for transportation of lend-lease goods and none of the money is for new ship construction."

Assistant Secretary of State Acheson meanwhile discussed with the subcommittee the status of negotiations with foreign governments on terms and conditions upon which lend-lease materials are furnished.

"He disclosed that several agreements have been made with nations in this hemisphere and that the basis of discussions with Great Britain have been transmitted to the British government," the statement said.

Nye Condemned

As Administration and isolationist forces unlimbered for the floor battles ahead on lend-lease and Neutrality Act revision, House Majority Leader McCormack charged Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, is seeking to divide the American people "along racial lines" while Charles A. Lindbergh seeks division on religious lines.

McCormack condemned a speech by Nye last Saturday before the Steuben Society of America in New York as an attempt to plant "false seed" in the minds of Americans of German descent.

The House Administration leader quoted Nye as saying:

"Those who spring from a race that contributed Gen. von Steuben to the winning of independence for America are under suspicion."

McCormack called it "an intemperate and untrue statement" and said Nye attempted "to inject into the minds of Americans of German blood the feeling of fear."

McCormack said "no decent person, no matter where he stands on the world situation, can afford to follow men who will stop at nothing."

War's Sidelights

Italians Told How to Wash Without Soap

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Rome, Sept. 26.—In the face of the continuing soap shortage, the Fascist party has issued a booklet telling Italian housewives how to launder with substitutes for soap.

One recipe says that if you cut six horse chestnuts very thin and let them soak for four hours in rain water, and then strain the mixture through a cotton kitchen cloth, it will make a fine lather for washing linen. Another recipe asserts that ivy leaves boiled for five minutes in water are excellent for cleansing dark colored garments.

A potato mash is also an excellent substitute for soap, the Fascist booklet declares the instruction is, as follows: "Make a paste of peeled potatoes and spread it over linen which has been in water for 24 hours; boil it half an hour; rinse in cold water, and you will find that your linen is beautifully white without using any soap."

Other substitutes for soap, as compiled by the Fascist experts, includes tomatoes, soluble grass and—for the cleansing of carpets and furniture—"oxen bile."

Italy Will Be Chilly

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Sept. 26.—This is going to be a cold winter, Italians learned today, when the newspapers published a forecast of the restrictions of coal supplies and heating.

This year heating in houses cannot begin before December 1 in northern Italy, December 10 in the center and December 20 in the south, whereas last year it began everywhere on November 15.

The new regulations will place a limit on the number of hours a day during which radiators can be heated—ten hours in the north and seven in the central and southern provinces.

Hot water for baths and other domestic purposes is to be restricted, according to plans, to three days a week.

Underwear Streamlined

London, Sept. 26 (AP)—Streamlined underwear for women is the latest wrinkle in Britain's war effort.

The Board of Trade announced that the new government-controlled undies would have no frills, little if any lace and would be within reach of everyone's pocketbook.

Each garment will bear the government stamp—CC 41 (CC meaning controlled commodity).

Luxury underwear, however, still will be obtainable but not controlled and it is possible that a pair of pink pants (uncontrolled) may cost $15.

$1500 for Bombs

Houston, Tex., Sept. 26 (AP).—Because war in Europe bars turning over $1500 from the estate of Raynoldt Grundy to his two sisters in German-controlled Latvia, the money will be invested in national defense bonds by court order.

The order, filed today, stated that the money thus "may be used in purchase of food for Britain or bombs for Germany, to be delivered via the air route on any object that the R.A.F. may choose."

Walter Chalmers, deputy county clerk, said that when world conditions permit the bonds will be delivered to the sisters, Grundy, a seaman, died aboard ship in New York Harbor November 1, 1940.

Ito Stresses Peace as Axis Alliance Aim

By Otto D. Tolischus
Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Sept. 26.—Setting the keynote to tomorrow's official observance of the first anniversary of the signing of the triple alliance, Dr. Nobufum Ito, president of the information board, tonight broadcast to the nation his interpretation of the pact in which all emphasis was laid on its peaceful character but also on Japan's determination to seek the "ultimate realization" of a new order world.

"The three-power pact," Dr. Ito declared, "is unlike military alliances of the past, which were made for the purpose of gaining advantage for the prosecution of war. Its purpose was to forestall the spread of war, and to establish world peace on a firm foundation in conformity with the imperial rescript and the spirit of the empire's foundation."

Therewith Dr. Ito took issue with former Foreign Minister Matsuoka's interpretation of the pact as an automatic obligation on the part of Japan to plung into the war in case the United States got into a "shooting" conflict in the Atlantic.

Disavows War in Europe

But while disassociating Japan from the European war, Dr. Ito emphasized that Japan was committed to the establishment of a new order in greater East Asia and inasmuch as the triple alliance pact has recognized Japan's leadership in that project, "it was quite natural that Japan should cooperate with Germany and Italy, which, with us, have the same ideals and aspirations."

"We are determined to exhaust all peaceful means possible in accordance with the spirit of the pact," Dr. Ito concluded, "and if there is any interference by a third power to dispel it and resolutely go forward with steady steps to the ultimate realization of a new world order, the spirit of the three power pact constitutes the keynote of our diplomacy. That will not be affected in the least by attempts of third powers to alienate the three countries from one another."

Meanwhile the Cabinet today approved plans for increasing the importation and the production of food, the controlling and economizing of consumption, and the storing of food for emergency.

The plan includes a proposal to add sweet and Irish potato starches to bread and to reduce the mulberry, peppermint, tea and tobacco acreage in favor of other crops.

Drive in China Stalled

Chungking, China, Sept. 26 (AP).—The Japanese drive toward Changsha, capital of Hunan Province, has been stalled by 24 hours of Chinese counterattacks and flank broadsides, dispatches from the front reported tonight.

Heavy fighting was said to be raging south of the Milo River, with enormous casualties on both sides.

In Changsha, Japanese Say

Shanghai (Saturday), Sept. 27 (AP).—The Japanese military announced today that their troops had entered the outskirts of Changsha, and that hand-to-hand fighting was raging.

Earlier Japanese reports claimed the destruction of four of the seven defending Chinese armies and the encirclement of another.

Men Against Machines

London (Saturday), Sept. 27 (AP). The crew of a British coastal command plane, the first to fly into Russia as far as Moscow, reported today that with home-made assembly tools the Russians had put a consignment of American-made warplanes into the air within four days of delivery.

The air ministry said the proper tools were due to arrive in a week or two.

McFarland Bows To Football's Lure

Clashes With Clark At Movie Hearing

SENATOR McFARLAND
Shakes His Fist at Senator Clark

There was a very impatient Senator up in the big caucus room of the Senate Office Building yesterday.

He was Ernest W. McFarland, of Arizona, and he was armed with railroad reservations and a ticket to today's Arizona-Notre Dame football game, to be played in South Bend.

It was getting close to train time, and Senator McFarland, who had made no secret of his plans for the weekend, was listening to testimony which, he said, had "absolutely nothing" to do with charges that Hollywood is turning out war propaganda films.

Senator McFarland, the only non-isolationist member of the Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee, which is holding hearings on the war propaganda charges, stuck it out to the end of the session, though, and found time for half a dozen digs at the subcommittee majority before departing.

Wins Crowds' Applause

The big Westerner has been needling the isolationist managers of the hearing for three weeks now and drawing applause a dozen times a day from crowds in the committee chamber.

Ernest McFarland three weeks ago was as obscure as any freshman Senator on the Hill. Washington knew he had won his seat by beating out Henry F. Ashurst, colorful veteran of Arizona politics, in the Democratic primaries last year. But that was about all Washington knew.

Now the Capital is taking notice of the movie investigation's one-man minority, easy-going in manner but painstaking in cross-examination and quick to challenge any criticism of Administration foreign policy.

Is War Veteran

McFarland is 46 years old, a World War veteran with degrees from the University of Oklahoma and Stanford. He served as assistant Attorney General of Arizona for two years and as Pinal County attorney for six years. From 1934 to 1940 he was judge of the Superior Court of Pinal County.

His speech is slow and quiet in private conversation, but it picks up speed and volume—and his ruddy face turns a couple of shades darker—when he goes into action at the movie investigation.

Senator McFarland contends that the hearings are "a complete waste of time" and at least once in every session suggests that the subcommittee "admit we have nothing to investigate." He is constantly protesting at the admission of "evidence that would be thrown out of any court in the country."

Some critics of the movie hearing claim that Senator Burton Wheeler, of Montana, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, looked around for one non-isolationist after he had named four foes of the Administration foreign policy to the subcommittee to hold hearings on the Nye-Clark resolution and thought he had found in McFarland the right man, one who would sit and listen, and lend an appearance of impartiality to the subcommittee without slowing up the attack on Hollywood. These same critics today are pleased with the appointment, but they doubt if Senator Wheeler is.

Purchasing Mission had a "definite restriction" against employment of persons of German, Irish or Jewish descent, but later, under persistent cross-examination by McFarland, was unable to name any occasion when she had been advised of such a policy by any official of the British agency.

A Miss Pierce, of the British mission, had told her to "check on" girls of these racial strains, she said, but the witness could not recall any specific statement by Miss Pierce that the mission would not hire such girls.

David Wills, assistant to the British Supply Council, last night denied even that such a "check" was requested by the British mission.

"That is absolute nonsense," he said. "All that any secretarial school is asked to do is to tell us whether the girl and her parents were born in the United States."

He said the mission now has a number of German, Irish and Jewish Americans among its employes.

Questioning of Mrs. Oehman was conducted in the face of strenuous objections by McFarland and to the accompaniment of mingled cheers and derisive laughter from the audience.

McFarland told Tobey the charges against the British Purchasing Mission had "absolutely nothing to do with the purposes of this hearing." After Mrs. Oehman finished testifying, the Arizona Senator, a former judge, snapped out:

"This evidence speaks for itself. It's all hearsay. I think it was very, very bad to inject anything like this into the hearing."

Zanuck Wins Ovation

Earlier in the day Zanuck had won a prolonged ovation from the crowd in the caucus room for an impassioned defense of Hollywood against the war propaganda charges.

The 39-year-old vice president of Twentieth Century-Fox, took the stand in a sand-colored suit and sport shoes.

It was after he had read his prepared statement and the subcommittee had concluded its cross-examination that the witness announced he had "something more to say."

"I am proud to be a part of this moving picture business," he declared. He recalled "The Birth of a Nation," "The Covered Wagon," "The Big Parade" and Ma Joad's "we are the people" speech in "The Grapes of Wrath."

"I remember those things, and I remember the enjoyment they have given," Zanuck said. "I remember the laughter and all that, and I am very proud."

When the applause had finally died down, Senator Clark told the witness, "You're not only a creative artist but a rather skilled salesman."

Zanuck told the committee he was born in Wahoo, Nebr., enlisted as a private in the Army at the age of 15, served in France and is now a lieutenant colonel in the Signal Corps. He said his parents and grandparents were lifelong members of the Methodist Church.

"Senator Nye, I am sure, will find no cause for suspicion or alarm in that background," he added.

Hits at Axis Films

Zanuck said that any ban on war movies "would deny us access to the same vital developments which today fill our newspapers, magazines, books, radio and the stage . . . It would leave the American motion picture as worthless and sterile as those made in Germany and Italy."

The subcommittee kept Balaban on the stand only about ten minutes. The witness said no Paramount pictures had been described as containing war propaganda.

Paramount has confined itself to "musicals, action pictures and the lighter type," Balaban said. Clark apologized for "not having more questions to ask."

The day's session opened on a stormy note, with McFarland challenging Clark to submit to Senate debate the issue continuing the investigation. He said there would be no more than 18 votes in favor of further hearings.

"Thank you, Mr. McFarland," Clark said. "I notice people never holler until they are pretty badly hurt."

"Talk about me being hurt," McFarland cried, "you are the one who is going to be hurt before this thing is over."

The first witness of the day was James G. Stahlman, publisher of the Nashville Banner, now on duty with the Navy Department. He was called in connection with charges by Jimmie Fidler, Hollywood commentator, that Loew's, Inc., tried to get his column out of the Banner by threatening that paper with loss of advertising.

Double Launching Is Prelude to Liberty Fleet Day

GUARDIANS OF THE SEA LANES—The U. S. destroyers Hambleton (left) and Rodman were launched yesterday at a joint ceremony in the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Yards, Kearny, N. J. The double launching came as a prelude to Liberty Fleet Day today which will feature the launching of 14 merchant ships from yards all around the coasts of the U. S. The Hambleton and the Rodman will be commissioned within 60 days. The destroyers are two of six warships which slid down their ways this week. (Liberty Fleet Day story, Page 11) in the figure this month and a rise during November, December and January because of the priorities situation.

Some discussion in Congress is likely to result from the adding to the WPA rolls at a time when defense workers are sorely needed in many industries and when many more are to be taken on in some categories after plants are put in readiness for production. Also, there is a stipulation in the last WPA appropriation bill that the rolls should be kept within a one million average over a year. This can hardly be done if the rolls are further to be increased in the next few months.

"Having based our security wage on a minimum," said Mr. Hunter, "I think we are justified in considering a wage increase."

Points to Industrial Wages

He pointed out that WPA wages had been in effect for two years at the present scale and during that time weekly wages in manufacturing industries had risen by 32 per cent and retail food prices by 15 per cent.

Present WPA scales run from $31.20 to $81.90 per month in the South up to a $39 minimum and a $94.90 maximum in the North.

Odlum Announces Program To Spread Defense Work

Confessing that the defense program was "at least six months late, maybe a year late," in organizing an agency to spread armament work to thousands of factories, Floyd B. Odlum, director of the new OPM contract distribution division, yesterday announced a three-point program to combat priorities unemployment and to broaden the base of defense production.

The New York financier announced the objectives of the division, created by executive order three weeks ago, as follows:

1. Government action to break down large contracts and assist in the process of subcontracting the work to smaller firms, now threatened with extinction through lack of raw materials.

2. Making large defense contractors "intensify" a program of passing out as much of their work as possible.

3. "Organizing and mobilizing" small manufacturers so that they can handle defense orders.

Advisory Bodies Formed

Speaking at a press conference, Odlum also announced the formation of two advisory committees called for in the Executive order. One is the small business committee, to be headed by Walter W. Finke, of Minneapolis, president of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce. The other is the engineering committee, whose chairman will be George S. Armstrong, president of the Association of Consulting Management Engineers, Inc.

Odlum also announced additions to the present 39 OPM field officers of the former Defense Contracts Service, and forecast that eventually 100 and perhaps 200 such offices would be created in industrial communities. Present offices in Federal Reserve Bank buildings will be removed to other locations, he said, because he was convinced small businessmen did not like to go into the banks.

Although he declared that he was receiving full cooperation from the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission in the program of spreading the contracts and converting civilian plants to defense work, Odlum admitted that there would be "a lot" of small factories which could not be included in the defense program and which might face shutdowns.

May Make Civilian Goods

For these plants, he said, there might be direct allocations of scarce raw materials to keep them going, even though they made civilian, rather than defense, products. This was the first public admission of a defense official that such a policy might be adopted.

Odlum declared that "several thousand" full-time employes might be necessary on his field staff for the "huge organizational problem" of marshaling data on small plant facilities and stimulating the flow of defense contracts to them.

He said that there were "well over 100,000" factories that were possible of conversion, but that data was assembled on only 25,000 of them.

Inferentially criticizing past military procurement practices, the CDD director said there was "no sense" in giving companies contracts for materials that would not be delivered until 1943. Instead, he said, the building of new factories and equipment for these companies would be stopped if there were possibilities of placing the work in existing facilites of other concerns.

Asked if he could use the withholding of priority orders as a "whip" to force big companies to subcontract, Odlum admitted there were several practical ways of penalizing uncooperative manufacturers. He declared, however, that he had no intention of using "whips" or punishments and believed he could accomplish the results by persuasion and, if necessary, by guaranteeing the prime contractor the additional costs he might incur in farming out part of the work.

Indicative of a changed attitude on the part of the Army, which has been widely accused in the past of refusal to spread the work, Col. Ray M. Hare, of the Army ordnance department, said the military services were cooperating because they realized the importance of being backed by strong civilian morale. This was obtainable, he indicated, only if the civilian economy were functioning properly, without shutdowns of various plants.

In other action yesterday, the OPM priorities division announced that about 250 field offices of five different Federal agencies would cooperate in checking up on factories using priorities orders.

Admitting a few willful violations and abuses of priority privileges, the division announced an enforcement drive, beginning with shutting off supplies to guilty companies. The division will also seek to prevent accumulations of excessive inventories and will ask the 250 field offices to make frequent factory inspections.

'Chute Troops Seek To Halt Blue Gains

By Leon Kay
United Press Staff Writer

With the Blue Army Advancing on Shreveport, La., Sept. 26.—Bitter hand to hand fighting broke out along the central front tonight as Red Army parachute troops spilled from the skies behind the lines to stop the rapid advance of the Blue Army driving toward Shreveport.

I watched 119 officers and men float to earth in a cow pasture near Eunice, La., late today and scatter into the woods before the Blue Army's parachute guard could sound an alarm.

The parachute troops were a sacrifice mission sent to destroy food and fuel dumps and create the maximum of sabotage in an attempt to stall the steady advance of the Blue Army.

The operation was carried out with utmost precision. I was alongside the cow pasture, about 500 yards long and 300 yards wide, when a smoke bomb suddenly exploded.

All Out in 10 Minutes

The bomb, theoretically, was set off by a "fifth columnist." As the first whiff of smoke went skyward, four transport planes droned out of the sky, followed a few seconds later by 13 more.

The 119 men and officers and four umpires were all on the ground within ten minutes, amid the confusion caused by the smoke and bawling cows stampeded by the operation.

Trench mortars, machine guns, rifles and ammunition were dropped to the men before the planes roared away. The parachute troops began unlimbering their weapons and taking to the woods.

They vanished before Blue troops swarmed into the area to begin the hunt.

The paratroopers were believed to be the first part of a counter-attack by the Red Army which has been pushed back to within 50 miles of Shreveport by wave after wave of Blue infantry.

The fighting was becoming fierce along a line about 41 miles from Shreveport as the Red Army's badly crippled armored divisions made desperate counterattacks to halt the surging tide of advancing infantry.

The Red Army's first armored division was badly dispersed by the Blue's famed antitank formations and was fighting in a defensive action.

Gen. Walter Krueger, commander of the Blue Army, had not thrown the second armored division attached to his forces into the battle as yet, apparently saving it for the final thrust to blast a path into Shreveport, the goal of the present operation.

Gen. Lear was believed to have disposed his main force along the present line 41 miles from Shreveport for a "do or die" effort to save the city. The Red Army was driven from its advantageous positions along the high ground of Pearson's Ridge today as Blue infantry swept along the entire front in a steady advance.

The retreating Reds blew up numerous bridges as they fell back, but the Blues were advancing practically without opposition, especially in the vicinity of the towns of Zwolle and Robeline.

Largest Plant Of Type Starts Turning Out TNT

Joliet, Ill., Sept. 26 (AP).—Manufacture of TNT and other explosives started today at the 51 million dollar Kankakee Ordnance Works, which the Army described as "probably the largest plant of its kind in the world."

Lieut. Col. T. C. Gerber, commanding officer of the 22,000-acre plant announced that one TNT production line is operating. It is the first TNT plant built in the defense emergency to go into production.

The President's Day

By International News Service

FAREWELL TO A ROOSEVELT: The flag over the White House flapped dismally at half-mast yesterday and in the famous East Room a few members of the Roosevelt family and a handful of close friends said farewell to the First Lady's colorful and life-loving brother, G. Hall Roosevelt. Dressed in deep mourning, and seated alongside the First Lady was Eleanor Roosevelt Elliott who was introduced to society by her aunt and namesake in the same room a little more than three years ago. Also present was G. Hall Roosevelt's surviving son, Henry P. Roosevelt, Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, Capt. and Mrs. James Roosevelt completed the circle of relatives. Last night the President and Mrs. Roosevelt boarded the Presidential special with the body for burial at Tivoli, N. Y.

AMERICA THY NAME IS LEGION: First of the President's three official appointments brought Lynn Stambaugh, new commander of the American Legion into shake hands, talk and issue a few invitations. Former Assistant Secretary of War Col. Louis Johnson introduced the new legion chief who smilingly heard from the President that the recent convention's program "very much heartened and very much encouraged" him. Stambaugh reciprocated with an invitation to speak at Arlington Cemetery on November 11 and also at the legion's convention next year. Mr. Roosevelt accepted both invitations—God and the international situation willing.

CABINET PLUS: The full cabinet plus a covey of administrators such as Paul McNutt and Fiorella LaGuardia arrived for the 11 a. m. huddle, filed solemnly into the inner court of the executive offices.

DEATH AND TAXES: In spite of another family bereavement, the President had many problems of state and Government business to attend to—and did. When the cabinet exited two hours later, Harold D. Smith, budget director, came in to discuss the Nation's pocketbook problems and lunch off one of the two trays brought over from the White House serving pantry. During the day before the 3 p. m. funeral services, Mr. Roosevelt worked steadily away at his desk, issued one proclamation, one Executive order, cleared up the remaining paper work demanding immediate attention.

Douglas Calls On All to Help Defeat Hitler

Copyright by New York Times

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 26.—With the dangers of Hitlerism confronting them, the people of the United States must combine in a total effort to preserve the security of this Nation in a perilous hour, William O. Douglas, associate justice of the Supreme Court, warned the Civitan Club of Atlanta today.

Now that the World has taken sides, "the sons of freedom are aligned against the hosts of tyranny," he asserted.

"To think that we Americans have acquired immunity is to assume that a highwayman is not interested in the richest and most prosperous person in the world," he went on.

The American defense effort, he stated, must be a "total effort, whether we are workers in an airplane factory, farmers, housewives, business executives, or Government officials."

Americans today will sign the Declaration of Independence with their own hands "just as surely and with the same calm and grim determination as did those who signed it in 1776," Justice Douglas said.

"That document," he went on, "was no mere academic dissertation on freedom. The men who signed it knew that they must succeed or be marked for the hangman's noose. They knew what they were doing. You remember how John Hancock, as he signed his name in the big, bold handwriting which you see in copies of the declaration today, remarked, George the Third will be able to read that without spectacles.'

"When you raise your hand today in the oath of citizenship, our modern tyrants likewise will see it without spectacles.

"Today Hitler's 'Mein Kampf' condemns democratic institutions to destruction and their adherents to death or enslavement. His record of accomplishment on that score speaks for itself.

"When the Nazi youth sing 'today we are masters of Europe—tomorrow of all the world,' they do not add 'except America.'"

Fox Bankruptcy Case Settled for $885,000

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 26 (INS).—Settlement of the bankruptcy case of William Fox, former movie magnate, which originally involved more than 55 million dollars, was announced today.

Federal Referee Allen B. Endicott, jr., signed an order effecting a compromise with the All-Continent Corporation and members of the Fox family in the pending "recapture of assets suit."

Mansfield Penalized for Efficiency

figure must run as high as several hundred in the last few days. Furthermore, many hundreds of the remaining employes have been cut back to three and four hour shifts, in an effort to spread the work—and the available metal which provides the work—as far as possible.

The layoffs have not been the result of Westinghouse management being asleep at the switch. In fact, many months ago, long before the OPM selected Mansfield among the first group of towns to be given intensive study as possible victims of priorities unemployment, Westinghouse management had been carefully reviewing the problem with Government engineers. The objective, of course, was to utilize Westinghouse machines and Westinghouse workers in the defense program.

Results Are Poor

But the results have not been encouraging. Like other factories making household appliances, Westinghouse has great presses, highly organized assembly lines. It does not have, in quantity, the equipment to machine metal into fine airplane, ordnance or ammunition parts.

In fact, the high degree of efficiency which even a layman senses in a quick look at the roaring factory, has penalized Westinghouse's effort to convert to defense work. Its machines are highly specialized for the exact work at hand—consumers goods, household appliances.

Other Westinghouse plants, "custom" builders, have multiple purpose machinery, able to tackle a wide variety of jobs. As a result, they are loaded with defense work, making the Westinghouse empire one of the main defense suppliers. But the Mansfield "merchandise division" is a case apart.

The Mansfield plant has obtained one defense contract, to manufacture three million dollars worth of binoculars. But the machinery to make them must be supplied by the Government and will not be set up until next spring; few, if any, of the machines here can be used.

Feel They Can Do Job

Westinghouse officials are convinced that the Mansfield factory must step out in foreign, new fields if it is to handle defense work. They are confident, however, that the change-over can be made, that the employes can be retrained, that the tool room can retool the necessary machines, that the technical personnel is up to the extraordinarily difficult task.

The binocular contract, at best, will not employ more than 700 of the plant's 5000 workers. Other contracts must be obtained.

"Somewhere and someplace," officials say, "there's something in the defense program we can make."

The same spirit pervades a stove company not far away. Twenty people on its management staff are devoted exclusively to working on defense possibilities. Seeing the writing on the wall and starting two years ago, the company has bid on everything from field kitchens to hand grenades. Its officials practically commute to Washington. Thousands of dollars in time, effort and cash out of pocket have been spent on bids. But to date, the defense work in the plant occupies only 70 workers.

Like other stove companies, the factory faces inevitable layoffs and perhaps even complete shutdown unless remedial action is taken. The company has only a month's inventory. The scrap metal it needs has become so difficult to obtain that sufficient supplies have been secured only by the employes themselves, scouring the countryside—with considerable success—for rusting farm machinery and other agricultural scrap.

The company refuses to admit it is beaten on the problem of finding defense work, but its management is frankly discouraged. It feels, therefore, that its best hope for salvation lies in a Government determination to allocate steel to the stove industry as producers of an essential civilian item.

Defense workers must cook their food, the management argues. And, it declares, 86 per cent of all the stoves it sells go to defense homes, under the definition established by the OEM Housing Coordinator's Office.

Mansfield—dozens of Mansfields—are looking hard at Washington for an answer.

George C. Gist Dies; Prepared Budget For Capital Parks

George C. Gist, chief of the administrative division of the National Capital Parks, died unexpectedly yesterday at his home, 725 Jefferson Street Northwest.

His responsibilities included the preparation of the National Capital Parks budget, and he had been prominent in District affairs for many years.

He became an employe of the former Office of Public Buildings and Grounds in 1916. During the World War he served from June 4, 1918 to March 1919 as sergeant of ordnance with the 106th Ordnance Depot Company.

He recently represented the Department of the Interior in the Federal Employes Championship Golf Tournament.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Sarah B. Gist, a brother, Ben Gist, and two sisters, Mrs. Marie McKinney and Mrs. Robert E. Brown, all of Washington. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at Chambers funeral home. Interment will be at Glenwood Cemetery.

Arlington's Need of Road Repairs Cited

A proposal that Washington high schools be authorized to open classes in aviation will be put up to the House District Committee Monday with the support of the Board of Education and the District Commissioners, Chairman Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, announced last night.

The District's "mayor" at the same time looked forward to an early decision on another major item on the legislative program for the city—the question of whether any attempt is to be made to legislate restrictions on the level of rents here.

Randolph's aviation bill was docketed for the regular Monday meeting of the committee after Commissioner John Russell Young informed the chairman yesterday that the measure has the approval of school authorities as well as the commissioners.

The bill would authorize optional ground-school classes in aerodynamics, theory of flight, airplanes and engines, mechanics, meteorology, practical navigation and map reading. It would sanction an appropriation of $16,000 for immediate employment of six instructors in aeronautics.

Young told Randolph the Board of Commissioners support the legislation as "valuable both from the eduucational and from the national defense standpoint." Dr. Lawson J. Cantrell, acting superintendent of schools, and a majority of the school board also have indorsed the plan, Young said.

Though still noncommittal on whether he personally favors any form of rent-control legislation for the Capital, the chairman told reporters:

"There is a serious rent problem here. I was convinced of that last spring when I introduced the first rent-control bill. Undoubtedly, the intensification of national defense efforts in Washington has aggravated the problem."

Randolph added that he would study a voluminous record of hearings conducted on the subject by the special District Defense Subcommittee of which he is also chairman, and that he would call the subcommittee into executive session for a decision on the question Tuesday or Wednesday.

Three bills are before the subcommittee. One would freeze rents at date of enactment and authorize the President to name a three-member commission to regulate them. A second measure, supported by the Office of Price Administration, would empower Mr. Roosevelt to name a rent administrator with broad regulatory powers. The third bill, backed by real estate interests in the city, would set a ceiling on rents as of the September, 1940, level.

California Professor Produces New, Powerful Atomic Bullet

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Production of 96 million volt atomic bullets that may achieve striking results in the transmutation of the elements was reported today by Prof. Ernest O. Lawrence of the University of California.

These bullets are the nuclei of carbon atoms. They were whirled about in Professor Lawrence's 225-ton cyclotron until they attained the terrific speed and striking power characteristic of 96 million electron volts.

This is by far the highest energy ever attained by an atomic projectile through artificial means. The most powerful bullet heretofore turned out was the nucleus of the helium atom with an energy of about 32 million volts. It also was a poduct of the Lawrence machine.

Lawrence, addressing an audience at the University of Chicago's fiftieth anniversary celebration, said that while the carbon bullets might not smash an atom any more thoroughly than a 16 million-volt deuteron—the usual ammunition of the cyclotron—it would not be unreasonable to expect "striking differences" in the results.

The carbon bullet weighs six times as much as the deuteron, but at the same time it carries six times as much of an electrical charge as the more commonly used atomic bullet. This electrical charge is independent of the high voltage which is responsible for the bullet's velocity and it tends to deter the speeding nucleus from actually piercing the target atom.

However, its extremely high velocity and weight more than offset this electrical handicap and it will be used, Lawrence said, to crack some of the heavier atoms of matter.

When a flying deuteron, which carries one unit of electrical charge, penetrates the nucleus of an atom, it becomes a part of that nucleus and thus adds its electrical charge of the pierced particle. This in turn changes the nature of the original atom and it becomes another element.

Lawrence cited as an example the bombardment of iron atoms with deuterons. When a deutron bullet makes a hit, one unit of charge is added to the iron particule and it turns into an atom of nickel.

If the iron atom were to be hit by a carbon nucleus its total electrical charge would be increased by six units and it would become an atom of arsenic instead of nickel.

Aside from this difference, Lawrence said, use of carbon bullets may disclose something new and unexpected in atomic behavior. This has been the case in some other far-reaching advances in nuclear research.

With the 4900-ton cyclotron now under construction it will be possible, Lawrence reported, to produce deuterons of 100 million volts, carbon atoms of 600 million volts and neon atoms of 1 billion volts.

Experiments with neon atoms, still heavier than carbon already are under way. The work with the carbon atoms was done by two of Lawrence's associates, Dr. Emilio Segre and Cornelius Tobias.

Alaskan Waters Teem With Giant Crabs, U. S. Finds

There is no shortage in sight of giant Alaskan king crabs, the Interior Department revealed yesterday in a five-page release. The report dealt with a $100,000 crab investigation undertaken by the department more than a year ago.

Conclusion of the report is that "the giant Alaska king crab exists in numerous Alaskan waters in population sufficient to support an industry."

Second FBI Witness Tells Of Spy Ring

By Pat McGrady
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Sept. 26.—More than 20 years ago, William G. Sebold and Walter Nipken played together on the streets of Mulheim am Ruhr, Germany.

Today they met again, for the first time in more than 20 years, in Brooklyn federal court. Each had been active in American counter-espionage activities and each was credited by the Government with uncovering a spy ring.

They were star Government witnesses at the trial of 16 men charged with espionage conspiracy. An additional 17 defendants have pleaded guilty.

Nipken, like Sebold, joined the alleged spy ring under FBI instructions, fed it information of doubtful value and finally, cracked it.

Assigned by Gestapo

Sebold, principal witness for three weeks, had told of his assignment by the German Gestapo, his building of a "spy" radio station with FBI help, his hoarding of Gestapo funds while alleged spies here grumbled against their German masters and of information gathered on America's modern war machines for transmission to Germany.

Today Nipken took the stand and told of an alleged second ring. He testified that, as a highly responsible tool engineer in the airplane parts factory of Air Associates, Inc., Bendix, N. J., he was addressed last December 28 by a machinist, Karl Reuper, now a defendant.

"Reuper came to my home," Nipken testified. "He approached me for plans, drawings and information on aircraft and defense, which he said he would send to Germany.

"He promised me that I would be very well paid after returning to Germany—that large estates would be set aside for us—and at the same time any expenses would be paid by another party."

Consulted the FBI

Nipken said he stalled—and consulted the FBI the next day. Within a week, he said, he told Reuper to count him in.

"Reuper told me that he had been especially trained in Germany for spy work in the United States and that his specific job was to secure defense secrets and create discontent and bad feeling in the whole defense industry," Nipken continued. "I told him about the danger involved in his work, and he told me I didn't have to worry. He said he was especially trained for this and nobody could get anything out of him, even if he was killed."

Nipken said that, on Reuper's instructions, he took microphotographs of drawings, blueprints and defense instruments—he mentioned specifically hydraulic pumps, aircraft de-icing apparatus, machine-gun sights, antiaircraft guns and other defense equipment—and turned them over to Reuper, who he said, sent the stamp-size pictures to Germany via China.

"Then, later," related Nipken, "Reuper told me that they had received the films in Germany and found them poor. They couldn't make anything out of the pictures we sent. They told me to get better photographing equipment."

Carl Herman Schroetter, 48, an engineer and owner of Miami, Fla., sightseeing boats, was accused in a Federal indictment today as the seventh member of an alleged international Nazi spy ring.

He was charged with conspiring with Kurt Frederick Ludwig, described by Federal agents as a master spy, to transmit vital American defense information to the German Government through paid German spies in Spain and Portugal.

Ludwig and four others are awaiting trial next month; another defendant pleaded guilty.

Schroetter, expected to enter his plea next Tuesday, was arrested in Miami September 3. The indictment said he operated sightseeing boats under the name of John C. Post.

A native of Switzerland of German parentage, he was educated in Germany and came to New York in 1911. He said he was naturalized in 1930. Agents said he visited Germany in 1939.

George Arliss Fined $18,000 For Failure to Report Funds

Sum Only Fraction Of $158,000 British Might Have Taken

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 26.—George Arliss, 73-year-old Disraeli of stage and screen, was fined the sterling equivalent of more than $18,000 by the Lord Mayor of London today for failing to register some $52,000 in American and Canadian securities with the Bank of England under wartime regulations.

Arliss entered a technical plea of guilty, but "indignantly repudiated" the charge was a reflection on his honor and denied any intent to evade the law. He formally pleaded mitigating circumstances and his fine, in fact, was only a fraction of the $158,000 penalty to which he was liable.

Arliss testified he thought he had observed all government regulations regarding his money and securities, and his lawyer said the actor and his wife "have surrendered in dollars or tendered securities for regulation to the amount of something between £80,000 and £100,000" ($320,000 to $400,000).

Arliss said that he had left most of his financial affairs in the hands of his New York agent and added: "I am not very intelligent in this matter now. I was less intelligent then."

The lord mayor, looking over exhibits of letters from Arliss, observed:

"These are the letters of a very intelligent finance man."

He then ruled the affair a case of gross negligence calling for a severe penalty.

GEORGE ARLISS.

Profit Limit Won't Work, Nelson Says

of that 80 per cent can make parts of defense items and others can make things for civilian consumption out of substitute materials."

Nelson said he considered it one of his agency's biggest problems to eliminate "uncertainty" in some industries as to whether they can get supplies to continue operations.

"The system has got to be changed," said Nelson.

Nelson explained that under the present system of preference ratings a "double A" rating for vital equipment goes ahead of all others. Ratings are graduated in the order of their importance to defense and civilian life. For example, the agriculture implements industry, in the B-1 class, has about 20 rating claims ahead of it on metals.

"He (a firm) doesn't know what he will get with a B-1 rating or when he will get it; he may never get it," said Nelson. "Many other firms in the same business have the same rating. He might have to close up because he can't get a small part."

In such cases, he said, manufacturers can come back and probably get a higher rating but if "you get them all up to double A, you're right back where you started."

Nelson said he thought that could and would be remedied by "straight out allocations" but it would be difficult to work out.

He indicated the allocations system may be tried out in the agricultural instruments industry.

Early in his testimony, Nelson opposed a wage ceiling, such as was proposed by Baruch, because, he said, it couldn't be enforced, and like a 6 per cent profit limit, would reduce incentive to produce.

"What would you do to enforce it, build concentration camps?" he asked. "I don't think you would."

Nelson favored a ceiling over farm prices, but did not say where it should be.

Discussing substitution of materials during the emergency, he said a fire engine would illustrate.

"Give up the brass bells, the aluminum lighters and brass rails. It would still be a fire engine and able to put out fire."

Cudahy Says U.S. Spurned Report Telling 'Truth About Hitler'

By the United Press

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 26.—John Cudahy, former United States Ambassador to Belgium, charged tonight that the State Department spurned his "report of the truth" that Adolf Hitler had said an invasion of the Americas was a military impossibility.

Cudahy told a National radio audience (CBS) that the Nation's military experts had declined to "challenge Hitler's statement" and refused the truth to the American people, who "have a right to know."

Thus, he said, an improperly informed people is being led into war by a "willful minority" without consent of Congress. He urged the public to oppose repeal of the Neutrality Act—enacted by "prudent, reasonable men" to avoid incidents that "embroiled us almost unwittingly" in "that war 24 years ago."

"I told Hitler that many Americans reasoned that when the German military machine had conquered England, it would be turned against the Western Hemisphere," he said, recalling a recent interview with the German Fuehrer. "Hitler laughed and could not believe I was serious."

Cudahy said that Hitler, in ridiculing the idea of invading America, asked the "opinion of our experts."

"What the military men thought, I did not know and I do not know today," he said.

When he returned from the interview, Cudahy said, he felt it was his "responsibility to report the truth" to the Government.

Never Has Reported

"I had hardly landed in New York last June when I telephoned the State Department," he said, "but the acting secretary, Sumner Welles, gave me to understand that he thought it inadvisable to see me because of press speculation and so I have never reported on what I learned in Germany."

He asserted that ignoring Hitler would not annihilate him and recommended that if the Nation wanted to go to war, "let us do so in an American way, by a declaration of Congress."

But he warned that a declaration of war would be the first step toward unprecedented national debt, another "crushing depression" and a probable expeditionary force of 8 million men.

Wheeler Raps Willkie

Oakland, Calif., Sept. 26. (AP)—Senator Burton K. Wheeler, told an America first rally last night that the record should be examined concerning Wendell Willkie business connections.

The isolationist Democrat from Montana said Willkie was a director of a New York Shipbuilding Company holding millions in defense contracts.

"I make no accusation about Willkie's patriotism, but the record should be examined."

The Senator was heckled, and one man was ejected from the auditorium.

"THE KING OF LOVE MY SHEPHERD IS"
- - - REV. SIR HOKY BAKER - - -

The King of love my Shepherd is,
Whose goodness faileth never;
I nothing lack if I am His,
And He is mine forever.
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This hymn of simple and sincere faith, inspired by the 23rd psalm, was written by a wealthy baronet, who, despite his fame and riches, spent much of his time in Christian service. It emphasizes that the real test of a shepherd's love is his willingness to endure when the foolish sheep strays.

Clergy to See Film Premiere At Earle Here

Religious leaders of many faiths from Washington, New York City, Philadelphia and other places will attend the world premiere of the film, "One Foot in Heaven," at the Earle Theater October 2. The regular performances will begin the following morning.

"One Foot in Heaven" is the picturization of Newspaperman Hartzell Spence's best-selling novel about his father, William Spence, who gave up medical study to become a Methodist parson in the Midwest.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, headed a committee of prominent churchmen appointed by Daniel A. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald and president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, to select a technical adviser for the films.

He is Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church of New York City, and vice president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor. Having seen the picture at a West Coast preview, Dr. Peale hailed it as "one of the greatest pictures of this or any other year. There is nothing soft about it and it will have universal appeal."

Plans are being made to have one of the local church choirs sing several selections on the stage the night of the premiere.

Frederic March, who plays the role of the preacher, was once president of a Christian Endeavor Society in a Presbyterian church, while Martha Scott, who plays the minister's wife, is a member of the Church of Christ in Missouri.

Jews Start Yom Kippur Rites Tuesday

Through synagogues and temples on Tuesday at sundown will echo the haunting strains of the Kol Nidre, as Washington Jewry joins world-wide brethren in observing the sacred occasion of Yom Kippur—Day of Atonement.

Yom Kippur, dedicated to atonement and forgiveness of sins, will begin after families have eaten their last meal before the 24-hour fasting period. Earlier in the day, they will light candles—symbolizing the soul as God's flame—and which will burn until Wednesday at sunset.

Among the festivities evolved from the ancient harvest feast, Yom Kippur falls on the tenth day of Kishri, first month of the Jewish calendar, and was celebrated with great festivity in the days of the second temple at Jerusalem.

Principal orthodox rites will be centered at Beth Sholom, Adas Israel, B'nai Israel, Ohev Sholom, Tifereth Israel, Southeast Hebrew Congregation, Kesher Israel, Hebrew Travelers' Sheltering Society, Hebrew Home for the Aged, among others.

Fish Admits His Office Had Data Removed

sentatives truck driven by Charles Wilson, a House Office Building postoffice employe, was at Dennett's headquarters early Friday morning. Loaded with the mailbags it next went to the House Building. At least six of the mailbags remained there and at least ten later turned up at the America First Committee's offices, 126 C Street Northeast.

After this became public, Rep. Fish told The Post, by telephone from his offices in New York:

"I myself have not seen Mr. Dennett for a year or more, or had any conversation with him, direct or indirect, about the alleged papers, or anything else.

"I never was at his office and the statement of Mr. Stokes that a tall, well-dressed, distinguished-looking man has become a familiar figure to observant neighbors (of Dennett) did not refer to me, as I do not know where Mr. Dennett's office is and have never been there at any time and haven't heard from him in a year.

"This reference was introduced to convey to the reading public that I had called at Mr. Dennett's office and had been there while some mailbags were hauled away. That inference is nothing but a damnable lie and in my opinion a part of the smear campaign against those of us who are trying to keep this country out of war.

Referred to Lawyer

"Another newspaper, PM of New York, carried the statement that 'the Congressman himself was said to have been in the propagandist's office while the truck was loaded.'

"I have already turned the matter over to my lawyer to bring suit, as I am getting sick and tired of these absolute misstatements and untruths that are being published in prowar newspapers. And the time has evidently come to fight back and take these matters right to the courts, as the only protection that an American citizen has.

"Mr. Dennett recently telephoned my assistant secretary, Mr. Hill, and said he had 500 copies of a speech of mine that he had not used. My secretary said that he would be glad to have them back as that speech was out of print and he had a great demand for it. He said he would ask the truck to stop and get those speeches and bring them back to my office.

"Instead of that, the truck brought back 10 or 20 bags to my office, which my secretary refused to accept, as they were addressed to the America First Committee and we knew nothing about them. He told the man who delivered them to take them where they were addressed. The fact is that not one single bag was delivered at my office because Mr. Hill refused to take any of them.

Wants Speeches Back

"I have since found out that not a single bag was left at my office and not a single bag was put in any storage compartment which is in my name or to which I have the key. If any bags were left around the Capitol it was done on someone else's responsibility than mine or my secretary's.

"If they contain the 500 copies of my speeches, I want those speeches back. If the Government wants any bags that are left around the Capitol somewhere in my name they are perfectly welcome to them, except my own speeches. All they have to do is to ask for them."

Fish told the Associated Press that he didn't know anything about the Dennett mailbags, and that the story about them was "fake, complete frameup."

Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Washington chairman of the America First Committee, had this to say about the affair of the mail bags:

"The smear of the America First Committee undertaken by the Department of Justice will fade into nothing but a cheap trick on the part of the department itself. The rotten-egg technique has finally reached Washington with eggs at 60 cents a dozen.

"The ordinary procedure accompanying a grand jury investigation is for the facts to be first ascertained in secret and the press releases to follow. In this instance the story was given to certain newspapers before the facts were established, which procedure is actually illegal. If the department wishes to operate in such a manner that is the department's business. In the last war the Department of Justice stubbed its toe and it bids fair to be treading a devious path this time.

"So far as the American First Committee is concerned the Government is welcome at any time to examine our files. The committee has always been on the 'up and up' and always will be. Since the Government has never availed itself of this opportunity it is assumed that the Government appreciates the integrity of the committee.

Desires to Cooperate

"The day will come when all propaganda, German, British, Russian and all kinds will be investigated. The American First Committee will come out all in one piece and with a record that perhaps some governmental agencies will envy.

"The American First Committee desires at all times to cooperate with the Government in obtaining any information which will disclose the use of any foreign funds to influence public opinion. This goes for Fascist, Communist, or any subversive influences. The Government preaches unity, the Attorney General talks free speech while the Department of Justice lays a rotten egg."

Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge made a statement, too, as follows:

"The purpose of the grand jury investigation is not to investigate the activities of any American political group or individual in or out of the Government who is exercising his right to express himself upon policies. But the purpose is to inquire into certain activities that have come to the attention of the department with reference to the provisions of the Foreign Agents Registration Act. This act requires full disclosure by any person acting in this country for a foreign principal as to the nature of his foreign connections and political activities.

"The incident concerning the obtaining of certain material from the offices of the America First Committee was as follows: The department learned that certain material had been transferred from Mr. Dennett's Washington apartment to the America First Committee after Mr. Dennett had been served with a subpena. Thereupon, a subpena duces tecum was served upon the America First Committee to produce the material that had been transferred from Mr. Dennett's apartment and the Committee produced it."

The grand jury proceeding yesterday included protracted questioning of Dennett and a brief appearance of Isabel French, manager of the America First office here.

Miss French later said she was indignant over newspaper reference to the marshal's visit to her office as a "raid."

As for the mailbags, she said, she had no idea why Dennett should send them to her committee.

The bags that were examined by her staff, said Miss French, contained speeches of Congressmen, in unaddressed postage free envelopes.

A Man-Sized Job

Youth of 19 Works Alone On Cathedral

By The Associated Press

Liverpool, England, Sept. 28.—Construction of one of the greatest cathedrals of modern times is being carried on—for the present, at least—by one boy!

Arthur Ronald Brady, 19, is the only bricklayer now working on the gigantic Metropolitan Cathedral, a large part of which has been built, although there is still much left to be done.

Ronald's only companion is an ancient Irishman, Paddy Riley, who mixes and carries mortar.

The war and a shortage of labor and funds all contributed to the situation.

Ronald is proud of his responsibility.

"Of course it's not as if I'd built a whole cathedral," he explains, "but it does give me great satisfaction to know I'm carrying on the work."

He says he guesses his bricklaying job would last several years at the present rate, but he doesn't know when the war may call him away.

The cathedral was designed by Sir Giles Gilbert Scott to be the largest in the country. The foundation stone was laid by King Edward VII in 1904.

It has suffered no great bomb damage, but blasts knocked out some of its beautifully executed stained glass. Bomb fragments have scarred its walls in places but haven't impaired its beauty.

New Tropical Storm Roars Westward

By International News Service

Storms that lashed shipping lanes from the Caribbean to Lake Erie sent rescue vessels to the aid of foundering ships last night as the Weather Bureau warned of new gales blowing westward from the tropics.

Shipping in the Caribbean bore the brunt of the storm's impact.

The Cuban government radio reported it had received a distress call from the 2437-ton American freighter Muncove, owned by the Munson Line, which gave its position as off the coast of Venezuela in the Caribbean.

In the south Caribbean, rescue vessels were rushing to the assistance of the disabled freighter, Ethel Skakel, which had asked for immediate aid, radioing it had been caught in the path of a hurricane 400 miles southwest of San Juan. The 1811-ton vessel, carrying a crew of 28, left Los Angeles August 25 with a cargo of steel rails for San Juan.

A United States destroyer, after reaching the last reported position of five life rafts carrying nine men believed to be survivors of the freighter Ethel Shakel, radioed late last night that it was unable to locate either the rafts or their human cargoes. Meanwhile, the whereabouts of the Ethel Shakel and 19 other members of the crew remained a mystery.

In New York, the Coast Guard reported it had intercepted a Cuban radio report that the 4442-ton Latvian freighter, Abgara, had grounded near Manati, Cuba.

The weather Bureau's warning of a new tropical storm in the West Indies said severe gales and probably winds of hurricane force were blowing up southeast of Jamaica and moving westward. All vessels in the storm's path were warned to proceed with caution.

At Sandusky, Ohio, the 400-foot freighter S. B. Cooldige was towed into port after running aground as the result of a gale that swept Lake Erie.

At Block Island, far from the storm area, the 3018-ton freighter Essex, on her way to New York with a cargo of cork from Lisbon, ran aground in a smooth sea. Her crew of 41 was removed by the Coast Guard.

Government Workers' Right To Bargain Urged

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 26 (AP).—The State, County and Municipal Workers of America (C. I. O.) today affirmed its conviction that Governmental employes have the right of collective bargaining, after approving a constitutional amendment permitting use of the strike weapon by these workers.

5-Point Traffic Plan Adopted

admitted something is wrong with our setup," Young stated.

It was agreed, the Commissioner declared, that downtown Washington streets have reached the "saturation point" in traffic and every effort must be bent toward correcting the problem.

Although both Van Duzer and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, were reported unfavorable to any change in the present signal light timing system, Young said the Commissioners had decided to "give it a try" on specially selected streets. He did not name the streets, explaining the idea would first be studied.

Truck Ban Rejected.

The signal light change—advocated by The Washington Post last year after a careful survey—would be so designed as to permit freer and swifter movement of vehicles over greater distances than now are possible.

A proposal to prohibit trucks and taxicabs on certain arterial highways failed to meet approval of the Commissioners, it was reported.

Police Superintendent Edward J. Kelly, according to Young, agreed that greater alertness on the part of policemen assigned to traffic duty was essential to the city's safety.

Special instructions, it was announced, will be given officers to pay more attention to pedestrian safety, walking violations and motorists failing to yield the right of way at intersections.

Efforts will be made at once to strengthen the police motorcycle force, said Young. A total of 55 motorcycle men now patrol the streets day and night. This will be increased to 100 and special emphasis will be laid on rush hour traffic movement.

Favors Compulsory Assignment

Motorcycle men are now obtained through volunteering because of the risk involved. Young said he was in favor of compelling policemen to take motorcycle duty if they are qualified for such work.

Both Van Duzer and Inspector Arthur E. Miller, police traffic supervisor, agreed that additional policemen are needed at major light-controlled intersections to safeguard pedestrian traffic. It was recommended, said Young, that 20 or 30 additional men be assigned to this work.

In addition to prohibiting commercial vehicles from loading or unloading merchandise on main streets during rush hours, the Commissioners said there also would be a ban on street excavation work during the same periods.

Although no decision was reached, the problem of relieving congestion around Union Station also was discussed. It was suggested that both sides of the station be used as entrances and exits and an underground terminal for taxicabs be constructed, Young reported.

A total of 100 new concrete loading platforms to replace the present painted "safety" zones was authorized by the Commissioners. Work on these will begin immediately, it was announced.

The new-type zone will be raised 5 inches above the street and will have solid concrete posts at the approach ends instead of the streamlined design of existing platforms.

Andrews Sisters, 'Texas' Pack 'Em In at the Earle

The Theater's Top Harmonistes Run Ahead Of High-Velocity 'Western' on Ace Bill; Other Stage Acts Score Knockout Hits

"TEXAS," Columbia picturization of a story by Michael Blankfort and Lewis Meltzer, adapted to the screen by the authors and Horace McCoy, starring William Holden, Glenn Ford and Claire Trevor, with George Bancroft, Edgar Buchanan, Don Beddoe, Andrew Tombes, Addison Richards, Edmund MacDonald, Joseph Crehan and Willard Robertson. Directed by George Marshall. At the Earle Theater.

THE CYCLONE OF APPLAUSE that broke over the Andrews Sisters in the Earle Theater yesterday could be heard all over "Texas."

Not that "Texas" isn't a hard-riding, straight-shooting, comedy-riddled, rip-snorting "Western" of the cattle country in 1866, but the trio of hot-tempoed vocalists who, at the moment, are tops in their field, have come back from their adventures in the Abbott and Costello screen comedies at the peak of their form and popularity. They would purloin any bill on which they might be booked. And did it up in pink ribbons at yesterday's first performance. They would be singing yet, if the audience had had its way.

This "Texas" number of Columbia's is not completely in the blood-and-thunder groove. It would be a more authentic historical document if it were. But it obviously did not start out to be an important historical document. What it started out to be, and is, was an exciting melodrama of the cow country befcre the days of rail transportation, with a fair dash of romance and almost an over-abundance of comedy. It is the comedy that scratches it off the list of "pictures with a purpose." The fights are as funny as they are furious, the sheriff is a clown and the the evil genius of the entire goings-on also is a comedian in the subtle, or Walter Brennan, brand of humor. Until the very last, the minor climaxes are deflected from their legitimate uses by being translated into intervals of slapstick and "gagging." It is pretty elegant pastiming, of its type, but can't be taken seriously as a study of social conditions in a primitive era any more than it takes itself seriously.

The main theme of the blood-letting has a slow and difficult time getting to the surface through the flood of comic trivialities with which the picture opens. Dan Thomas and Ted Ramsay, fresh out of Jeb Stuart's cavalry, meet up, while headed for Texas in search of jobs, after the railroad is completed as far as Abilene. Dan is by way of being a shade on the renegade side; Ted matches him in valor and excels him in the honest virtues. They save each other's lives a few times, arrive in Texas just in time to get into the thick of the cattle war between the ranchers and the rustlers, fall in love with the same girl and both join the cattle drive north, but for exactly opposite reasons. The story should write itself from there on in any informed "Western" intelligence.

Cast Has a Whale of a Time

The cast, made up of youngsters in the stellar roles and veterans in their support, have fun. They play with lusty enthusiasm, bear down on the comic situations and never let the piece get too gory. William Holden, no more crooked than a corkscrew as Dan Thomas, but still endowed with a paradoxical sort of honesty, is getting to be quite a cowboy. He got a flying start in "Arizona" and is soaring in this one. Glenn Ford, who made so profound an impression with Fredric March and Margaret Sullavan in "So Ends Our Night"—at the time of the President's birthday celebration—is a little Harvardese in the role of Ted Ramsay, but you have to like the boy. He is always in there swinging on the side of right and "Mike" King, daughter of the first of the ranchers to get himself perforated. In this role of "Mike," Claire Trevor is cast as the robust sort of heroine that she does so well—sensitive and tender in the gentler of the romantic moments and exceeding tough to handle when she is being bounced around, which is a considerable part of the time.

The best performance in the play is contributed by Edgar Buchanan, as "Doc" Thorpe, the arch-conspirator masquerading as the village dentist. The oily Dr. Thorpe is a shrewd dissembler, as portrayed by one of the best of the character actors, who happens also to be a comedian of no mean dimensions. George Bancroft is out in front, too, as a flashy promoter and plunderer, and Andrew Tombes, teamed with the late Will Rogers when they succeeded Gallagher and Shean in the Ziegfeld "Follies," provides one of the comedy highlights as "Tennessee." The others are no slackers, either.

The Andrews Sisters Are Not Alone

It is a fast and fastidious stage bill that Harry Anger has whipped up for the current week. Nothing much remains to be said of the Andrews Sisters, except that they practically tear down the house with "Aurora," "Daddy, You Ought to Get the Best for Me," "Boogie-Woogie Bugler Boy," from "Buck Privates;" "Apple Blossom Time" and an arrangement of "Sonny Boy" never heard before. But they are not alone. Billy Rayes, is a revelation as a chattering, dancing impersonator-juggler, and Lowe, Hite and Stanley, ranging from 3 feet to 3 miles in height, always are good for a riot. The remarkable Roxyettes are everything from "cowboys" to hula dancers, and very neat at it, too.

With the orchestra on stage, only an unusually interesting newsreel and "Notes to You," one of the more inspired of the Looney-Tune cartoon comedies, are added to a bill that packed 'em in and sent 'em out ga-ga yesterday.

They Don't Look So 'Wild and Woolly,' at That!

GLENN FORD, CLAIRE TREVOR AND WILLIAM HOLDEN, reading in the habitual direction, as they appear in the three principal roles in Columbia's production of "Texas," the company's most recent "State" picture, now on view at the Earle Theater. Seen last season at the National in "Out West It's Different," Miss Trevor probably has discovered by now that it is

LEONARD LYONS

The Gypsy Gypped!

New York, Sept. 26.

LAMENT: Gypsy Rose Lee, the strip-teaser who describes herself as "The Naked Genius," was on her way to her dressing room in a San Francisco theater, rushing to arrive in time to get undressed for her show . . . En route, Gypsy tripped, sprawled on the sidewalk and her skirts flew over her head . . . The stripper glared at the pop-eyed men who had stopped to observe her. "If my show does no business tonight I know the reason," she sighed. "After all—you can't give it away and expect to get paid for it too."

KATHARINE HEPBURN

RETURN: Sam Byrd, who played the role of "Dude" in the original company of "Tobacco Road," once was presented with a battered front of an auto radiator. This was a gift from a group of Newburgh bankers, who were touched by the scene where Dude's car was wrecked . . . When, after three years, Byrd left the show, he gave this battered radiator to his successor. "This is supposed to be Dude's coat-of-arms," said Byrd. "And now you're Dude—so keep it" . . . "No, it's yours. You were the original," Sam's successor insisted, but then was prevailed upon to accept it . . . Sam Byrd now is producing "Good Neighbor." It is being rehearsed at the Forrest Theater, where "Tobacco Road" played for many years. Yesterday Byrd went upstairs to the dressing room he once had occupied. On the wall he found that same battered radiator.

CHATTER: After all these years, Frank Fay will return to night club entertaining—at La Martinique . . . The proprietors of Cafe Society will sue the new "Cafe Society" club in Hollywood, for an injunction restraining the use of that name, and then open their own branch there, with Hazel Scott. Miss Scott is going to Hollywood, to appear in Orson Welles' "History of Jazz," for which Duke Ellington will write the music . . . The Katharine Hepburn articles which Joe Bryan III wrote for the Saturday Evening Post will appear in four installments . . . Hal Roach will use the frozen funds he has in England, to produce a series of movies with Ben Lyon and Bebe Daniels. . . . Honeychil' Wilder has arranged for her own night club—the one formerly known as Mon Paris.

EDUCATION: "Do you think there's any chance for the people of the world?" writes William Saroyan. "I asked the barber that this afternoon, and he said: 'Open and shut case' . . . I am now studying high school at home, from a book I sent away for, in response to the shouting of a fellow on a cowboy radio station down by San Jose, and the stuff's fascinating. Twenty-four subjects, about 8 cents a subject. How do you suppose they say coffee in French? Cafe. How do you suppose they say dessert? Dessert. Wonderful stuff. Satisfaire—that means to satisfy. Simple—same as in English. Half the time I was talking French, and didn't even know it. Knowing it, I feel better."

QUERY: Gregory Ratoff, who came to town yesterday, received a phone call from a city editor who asked for an interview. "I haff been interwyood exahotly 1474 times," said Ratoff, "enti ohnly vunts deed they preent vott I sait." . . . Ratoff revealed that the sole occasion when the newspapers accurately reported his statement took place on the tender which brought him from the S. S. Majestic to Southampton. He had gone to England in response to a remarkable offer to appear in a British movie. The London newspaper men discovered him on the tender, and their interview was both short and direct. They asked him one question: "Is it true that your wife has left you?" Ratoff's reply was published in full. It was "No."

SUCCESS: Willard L. Thorpe, the cotrustee of the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, went to Chicago this week to speak at the fiftieth anniversary of the University of Chicago. After his speech—the subject of which was "New Frontiers"—he telephoned his secretary, who asked him: "Well, how did it come off?" . . . "Fine, fine," said Thorpe. "And I'm bringing you a nice present—a bucket of vegetables" . . . "Where'd you get 'em?" asked the secretary. . . . "It was easy," replied Thorpe. "I just picked 'em off the stage."

Bob Hope Guest Star

Bob Hope, among the foremost of the stage, screen and radio comics, in the East between pictures, will make a single personal appearance in Washington, at Loew's Capitol Theater, at the 9:15 performance of the stage bill tonight. His next Paramount starring vehicle, "Nothing But the Truth," will be shown later in the season on a Loew screen.

Constance Bennett Invokes 'Law of the Tropics,' at Met

"LAW OF THE TROPICS," Warner Brothers picturization of the novel by Alice Tisdale Hobart; adapted to the screen by Charles Grayson, costarring Constance Bennett and Jeffrey Lynn, with Regis Toomey, Mona Maris, Hobart Bosworth, Frank Puglia, Paul Harvey, Thomas Jackson, Craig Stevens, Roland Drew, Charles Judels, Chic Clark and Rolf Sedan. Directed by Ray Enright. At the Metropolitan Theater.

That tested and true crime adage of the FBI and the Hays office, "You can't get away with it," is stirred into the plot of "Law of the Tropics" to force Constance Bennett from the arms of her bridegroom into the custody of a detective. But, as usual in celluloid romance, you get the idea that after the trial all will be love and lollypops again.

La Bennett, as a night club nightingale of the tropics, finds Jeffrey Lynn alcoholically awash to the scuppers over being jilted by his fiancee. So just to spare him embarrassment she returns with him to his rubber camp and poses as his bride. (Now where did we see that one before?) Running true to form in this sort of imbroglio, or debacle, they proceed really to fall in love with each other.

But a dauntless Javert is on the trail of Constance, on account of a slight case of murder. He's Thomas Jackson, whom we remember as an ace player of detective roles since away back in—well, never mind that. Connie jumps through a window to evade Jackson, has him kidnaped by a donkey and a felolw named Tito.

Simultaneously, the plot is being tangled up by Jeffrey's employer, a revolting person who sends "pep and inspiration letters" to his employes, amputates their noses on the grindstone, fires them when they become senile from toil. Jeff doesn't mind it—much—when the big boss appropriate a valuable process he's developed. But his blood boils when Junior, his employer's son, is named his superior. Junior boils, too, when Jeffrey calls him a "loud-mouthed jerk." They have a shindig which leaves Junior on the floor, all the office furniture broken up and Jeffrey a candidate in the employment market.

And guess what! Constance gives the boss a good talking-to and he promotes Jeff to the manager's post, more than doubles his salary, mutters reflectively as she leaves, "Now why couldn't Junior take up with a girl like that."

There isn't much to say about the production in general except that Jeffrey Lynn has grown a new moustache, and very becoming it is. Also that Constance Bennett's acting remains up to the standard she maintained in her days as a major star.

"Minstrel Days" is the most enjoyable musical short we've seen this year. It traces blackface minstrel entertainment from its beginnings, includes impressions of such famed minstrels as Eddie Rice, George Primrose and McIntyre and Heath. Another top short is "Kings of the Turf," a Technicolor story of the rearing and training of a standard bred trotting horse. In the newsreel you'll see the first pictures of the new "Sea Otter," which promises to make the Atlantic so unhealthy for submarines.

HEDDA HOPPER

Eddie Rescued From the Eddies

Hollywood, Sept. 26.—Well, RKO certainly have their wits about them in signing Eddie Albert to a long-term contract. That's the best news I've heard in ages. With all of this hue and cry for talent you hear around this town, it's seemed pretty silly for an actor like Eddie to be wandering around loose for even a day.

DOROTHY COMINGORE

How many of you thrilled, as kids, to that wonderful description in Kipling's Jungle Book of the ruined palace in the heart of the jungle where little Mowgli stumbles through a hole in the courtyard and pitches head first into the "Treasure Chamber" that is guarded by the great King Cobra? Well, they've built the set for the picture and Alexander Korda has stripped every dealer, collector and other studios in town for the fabulous jewels, gold coins, heavy plate, and golden idols with which the buried room was piled. Filmed in Technicolor, it's really something to shout about.

Some people have all the luck. Here's Dorothy Comingore, not only in demand for about 'steen pictures, but she's got what I've always dreamed of having, a dress designer right in the family. Harry Collins, the internationally known couturier, is designing Dot a complete wardrobe, on account of she's married to his writer son, Richard.

Ray Middleton took fencing lessons for two weeks, suffered a cut under his eye and quite a few scratches, and after all that, John Wayne returned to the fold and wanted to be the villain in "Lady for a Night," at Republic—so Ray's fencing was all in vain 'cause he'll be the hero in the picture now . . . Eddie Norris has given his house boy a present of a trip to Honolulu to visit his family whom he hasn't seen for 15 years. Nice work if you can get it.

Richard Thorpe, director of the "Tarzan" pictures, and pretty well fed up on jungle stuff, took off for a Canadian vacation after completing "Tarzan's Secret Treasure," and stopping overnight at a small village hotel, asked the desk clerk to send him up something to read. Yep, up came a couple of Tarzan books! . . . Ruth Hussey saw "Philadelphia Story" in a neighboring town, for the first time the other night and sat through two performances. On the way back her car broke down. Reached home at 4 a. m. Now she's sticking to making pictures, not seeing 'em.

Over at Warners they called in Fred Ponedel, their firearms expert, for a marriage sequence between Alexis Smith and Craig Stevens in "Bridges are Built at Night." "What is it?" asked Fred, "one of those shotgun affairs?" . . . Roy Rogers had a new one pulled on him the other night. Starting out on a P. A., he bumped into another car and snagged the fender. The fellow, mad as hops, ran back to Roy's car, but when he saw who it was calmed down and asked him to autograph the fender.

D. C.-STATIONED SOLDIER'S ROMANCE PICTURED IN PARADE—TOMORROW!

18 Topics Sunday Give Variety to Washington Post Magazine Section

LUCILLE BALL may be a shapely movie comedienne to you but she's a farm girl to husband Desi Arnatz. Parade pictures Actress Lucille and Actor Desi at home on their five-acre "ranch" in California . . . and throws in a picture of Lucille doing her famous wind dance, with the country forgotten and the sex appeal turned on. Other pretty girls featured in the current Parade: Eleanor Powell rehearsing dance steps on the beach; students at a co-op Recreation School; Lillian, the average girl, at a county fair; Hildegarde, the singer.

YOUNG TURKS look like this husky, says Parade, bringing you the picture story of 21 years of modernization in Turkey. Other Parade articles on foreign countries: (1) What the French in Indo-China think about the Japanese, about Vichy, and about the U. S. A. (2) The true story of American supplies' arrival and use in England.

BASEBALL'S BIGGEST MOMENT was probably the one when Babe Ruth called his shot in the 1932 World Series—pointing to the bleachers and hitting the next pitch into them for a home run. Other dramatic World Series moments are recalled by Parade this week, and there's a picture story of Red Barber, who'll announce the Series games this year.

THEY MET. They fell in love. They quarrelled. She gave him back his ring. He joined the Army to forget. She couldn't forget and wanted him back. But she couldn't find him.

There's a typical O. Henry short story plot for you. But what happened to Pat and Tommy wasn't fiction—it was real. And, fortunately, it didn't end like that short story plot. Because Pat found out about a radio program that helps find missing people. She went on the air and broadcast her "I'm sorry we quarrelled . . . please contact me" message. Sure enough! Along came a "rushing home" telegram from Tommy, now a private at Fort Belvoir, right here in Washington.

You can't have any privacy in these days of press photographers! A Parade photographer was right there when Tommy and Pat were reunited, and he stayed and took pictures of the happy couple during the three days of Tommy's leave. You'll find those pictures in tomorrow's Washington Post, in Parade, the picture-magazine section. We think you'll get a thrill from the happy ending to this "lovers' quarrel" plot. And we're sure you'll be entertained by the rest of the 18 different topics Parade tells you about, or pictures for you, in this Sept. 28 issue.

Paper Waste

So used have city dwellers become to wages and salaries that home enterprise, as far as incomes are concerned, has almost fallen into the discard. The waste-paper campaign calls to mind one way it may still be practiced. Save 100 pounds of magazines, newspapers, letters, envelopes, etc., and call a collection truck. The driver will collect the paper, and you may collect the cash unless you choose to donate it to a charitable organization. The campaign, undoubtedly without intention, serves up a moral for saving which should inspire any number of slogans with a Rotarian ring, such as: "Why Waste Waste Paper in the Wastebasket?" or "A Paper Saved Is Something Earned." However, its real purpose is more modern. The campaign is designed to provide needed material for making boxes in which to pack defense materials. It seems hard that those living in rooms, small houses, and apartments (where the accumulation of paper is almost impossible and might, indeed, be a fire hazard) should be denied the chance to demonstrate their waste-paper patriotism. This problem could be solved if charitable organizations were permitted to place receptacles at busy corners for small offerings. There would be no more work attached to collecting from such containers than from private residences. The project should be worth while if the lesson of World War I is any guide. For the tinfoil barrel of the last war is still a well-known success legend.

Freedom First

It was opportune to release the letter to the Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in which Secretary Hull disposed of the Hoover plan for feeding the occupied countries in Europe. The letter was written on June 19. Senator Connally released it on Thursday, on the day after the governments of the nine European countries now in exile in London and the Soviet Union had decided to set up a food pool. This is the plan which our Government prefers to back rather than the Hoover plan.

The reason for the preference will be obvious to anybody but the most unrealistic humanitarian. Mr. Hoover, whose proposal has already taken the form of a bill in Congress, would not wait till the occupied countries have regained their freedom. The new world plan, on the contrary, would be realized after the Germans have been driven out. The precedence is all-important. If the United States were to embark on relief now, any such step would be a direct aid to the Nazis. For the Nazis, who never weary in proclaiming the self-sufficiency of Germanized Europe, have systematically despoiled the occupied countries for the benefit of the herrenvolk of their own. The inferior Europeans, in other words, are starving that the superior folk might live well. The latest illustration is the order to the Norwegians, whose winter is one of the bleakest, to surrender all their woolen blankets for German use in the winter campaign against Russia. "It is clear," says Secretary Hull, "that the responsibility and manifest duty to supply relief rests with the occupying authorities, as it is well known that the German authorities have removed from the countries under occupation vast quantities of foodstuffs belonging to the peoples of those countries, and within those countries have diverted food supplies from children to persons working in behalf of the German military effort."

It used to be argued that the governments in exile were secretly back of the Hoover plan. Certainly a good deal of pressure has been brought to bear upon them. That they have not spoken out heretofore in putting freedom before relief has been due to the cruel dilemma in which they were put. If we in America feel the call of humanity arising from the situation of the starving Europeans, how clamantly must the call sound to the fellow countrymen of the starving? But any condemnation on their part of relief now might be flung back at them in the days to come as evidence of lack of fellow feeling. Now, as a result of the London pool, they are committed to a plan which, as The Post said in the early days of the Hoover agitation, is the only scheme which would combine common sense with humanitarianism. Under this plan the head is joined to the heart.

What the occupied countries need first from all free countries is help in the struggle against their Nazi oppressors. Evidently that is how they feel, too. It used to be said, in behalf of the Hoover plan, that revolt was impossible. The peoples in Europe, however, are proving the contrary. Led by the manner in which Hitler is being fought to a standstill, revolt is spreading, and there is even talk in London of invasion to help it to victory. So the motto is: freedom first, then relief. Both would be postponed if we indulged in Don Quixote feeding which fed only the Nazis.

Dead Hand

Emerson gave a motto to leaders in the American democracy when he said that the people would always support a bold and just course even though they condemned it in advance. This has been proved in the case of the President's shoot-at-sight orders to our Navy. Senator Capper in the Senate and Representative Dirksen in the House, who have switched to the President's side, are signs of an increased support for the President in the Middle West. Words which a short while ago were regarded as horror words—such as "convoys" and "shooting"—have turned overnight into everyday speech.

Public opinion has changed sufficiently, indeed, to make the word neutrality an impostor word. We have never been neutral in thought toward the "crime without a name" which is Hitlerism. Now the American people, with the common sense which Theodore Roosevelt used to say should be the President's reliance, see it as a menace, too. And the recognition that Hitlerism is a menace to our continental security is written in all our activities. We have had to turn our Nation into an armed camp. In elementary self-interest we are pursuing a policy of succoring all those brave peoples who are holding Hitlerism at bay. And we have decided that prudence calls upon us to shoot in the same language with the British and clear the seas of the submarines and surface raiders which are intent upon extending Hitler's dominion over the wide Atlantic. Yet the Neutrality Act has been allowed to remain on the statute books like a New Year resolution which has lost all reality except as a nostalgic reminder of idle castle building.

Senator McKellar now has introduced a repealer to end the inconsistency between this statute and our present frame of mind and policy. He says that the act was a mistake. Those of us who felt this way when the act was first brought before Congress need now only adduce the facts by way of support. It was imagined that the Neutrality Act would keep wars away from our shores. In point of fact, the act, by waiving in effect our traditional rights and security on the high seas, is encouraging the war to come into our hemisphere. Our Navy, in consequence, has been instructed to see that the help we are extending to our associates in anti-Hitlerism shall get to them. Yet our merchantmen can take them only as far as Iceland. Our Navy is armed for the purpose of sinking the marauders who are sinking American boats and American goods and American lives. Yet the merchantmen themselves remain unarmed. The lack of logic in our policy that arises from the prohibitions of the Neutrality Act has become sun clear, and it is time, therefore, to rid ourselves of any incubus which makes for "soft hitting."

It is only realism, then, that calls for the abandonment of every legal restriction in the Neutrality Act which hinders the execution of our defense policy. Too long has the Neutrality Act been allowed to remain a standard to which saboteurs can repair, in which oppositionists may find a base for needling the President even when acts of Congress such as the Lend-Lease Act have already supplied their own nullification. The statute stands in the way of a forthright union between our feelings and our actions. All it has done is to promote what Mark Sullivan has called our national schizophrenia. The Administration may prefer amendment to repeal, but repeal only can appeal to those who, with Senator McKellar, were originally opposed to the neutrality law, and repeal is likewise consistent with present-day American sentiment and American action.

Decline Of The West

Alas, alas! You would hardly believe it, but it seems that people have been misunderstanding poor Mae West. They think that what she says to them in that semitropical drawl of hers is, "Come out and sue me sometime." And that, it seems, is exactly what they have been doing, including her half legendary husband, one Frank Wallace, who now wants $1,000 a month to keep him from the poorhouse. La West testified the other day before a San Francisco court that, what with one thing and another, her bank account is thousands of dollars overdrawn, that her safe-deposit box is absolutely empty, and that even her beloved jewels are gone. Not to put too fine a point on it, the Little Chickadee has, as it were, hardly a feather to her nest.

And yet, though La West may have parted company with prosperity, we cannot observe that she has suffered much diminution of her popularity. When those new pneumatic jackets, designed to keep the boys from drowning if they fell into the Channel, were issued to the R. A. F. flyers, they were fondly and loyally christened "Mae Wests." Evidently the idea was that they were something a fellow could hang on to when all else had failed. It is a touching tribute. La West thus joins that highly select company, including the late Albert Edward Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, the fourteenth Earl of Derby, the late Charles Mackintosh, the late Joseph B. Stetson and the Messrs. Burberry, whose names have been immortalized in male garments. As closely as we can recall, La West is only the second of her sex to be thus honored; the other being Mlle. Fedora, a purely imaginary creature out of one of Sardou's pieces.

The wide and flourishing cult that La West enjoys among members of the male persuasion has never been adequately explained. Our guess is that it is mainly nostalgic. La West once described her mission as that of "fetching sex out of the back room," but it all goes to show how rarely genius understands itself. What La West accomplished was to put it back into the back room. In the age of the sports suit, the svelte boyish figure, the slouching shoulders, the undraped leg, the saddle shoe, she has managed to look like an apparition out of the late Mr. Fox's Police Gazette. She is the sort of gal that would make it worth a chappie's while to put on a check suit and to wax his moustache. In short, La West is precisely the sort of lady whose name could—if any such places now existed—be mentioned without qualm in an old-fashioned barber shop or club.

Why Not Enforce It?

The story of the missing mail bags will certainly bear further investigation, and there will be no lack of zeal on the part of Government agents in clearing up the mystery. In the meantime the Department of Justice might well give some attention to the 10 bags of franked mail which turned up at the office of the America First Committee. It appears that this franked mail was taken from the office of Prescott Dennett, secretary of the Make Europe Pay War Debts Committee, by a truck dispatched from Representative Fish's office, and, after being rejected by one of Mr. Fish's secretaries, was sent to the Washington office of America First. The clear implication is that both these organizations are busily engaged in propagandizing the country through abuse of the franking privilege.

Mrs. Bennett Clark, Washington chairman of America First, confirms this implication, so far as her organization is concerned, by saying that the receipt of material to be franked is a "daily practice." "It is our practice," she is quoted as saying, "to address these [the franked envelopes] and send them back to the Capitol for mailing." That sounds like a frank confession of violation of the law. Section 335 of the United States Code, which was quoted by Majority Leader Barkley recently for the information of Senators and the public, reads as follows:

> It shall be unlawful for any person entitled under the law to the use of a frank to lend said frank or permit its use by any committee, organization, or association, or permit its use by any person for the benefit or use of any such committee, organization, or association. . . .

Why doesn't the Department of Justice enforce this law? Its flagrant abuse is costing taxpayers considerable sums of money in addition to putting the Government in the position of subsidizing propaganda that often runs contrary to the national interest. Is the department afraid to set a precedent for enforcement of this law? Senator Wheeler once told his colleagues that the Democratic National Committee sent out 13,500,000 franked cards in the 1936 campaign at a cost to taxpayers of $130,000. The Republican Party also takes flagrant advantage of the same forbidden privilege. Of course, the Attorney General should not enforce the law against the America First Committee without making it generally applicable. But it is high time for this statute to be dusted off and invoked against all violators. Failure of the Department of Justice to act will lay it open to the charge that it is winking at defiance of the law in order to protect politicians who wish to continue sending out propaganda without postage.

PRISONERS

What shall I do with the words I have written,
What shall I do with the words "beauty" and "peace"?
What shall I do with the golden fruit death-bitten,
What shall I put on my tongue in place of these?

Oh where shall I hide them now from the fierce fire,
Where can I go now to speak them, half-ashamed?
I hear the answer: "Heap them upon the pyre—
Be merciful to the wounded and the maimed."

But I'll not heed! I shall go to a dark wood
And make for them there a sheltered prison;
And they will be safe from the flames and the flood
Till the new day has dawned, the new sun risen.

Propaganda Rights

Is it not a fair question to ask why this investigation of the motion picture industry, being conducted in the United States Senate by a "packed" committee of isolationists, and which, according to Mr. Wendell Wilkie, is of doubtful legality, is not stopped?

By what right do these Senators attempt to suppress freedom of expression—be it in song, picture, or writing—however much from their viewpoint such expression may savor of war propaganda? Under our Constitution, have I not the right to urge that my country go to war rather than to submit to Nazi domination? I have. If I were an executive of a motion picture company, would I not have the right to present this same view on the screen? I would. And furthermore, I would not feel obliged to make a picture presenting the opposite view any more than I would feel called upon to write a pro-Nazi article because I had written one condemning their brutality and inhumanity.

It is no less than dictatorship modeled on Nazism for this committee to attempt to coerce the motion picture industry, because it has presented anti-Nazi films, into presenting pro-Nazi pictures—involving the suppression and distortion of facts.

By what right do these Senators use their high elective office to attempt to prevent the truth from reaching the people through a legitimate form of art? By what right do they attempt to censor what the people of the country shall or shall not see?

We, the people, individually, are the proper judges of what we shall or shall not see, and this right of selection includes so-called war propaganda pictures as well as others. We are entitled to select and do select from the vast output of motion pictures the ones we wish to see, the same as we choose from the immense field of literature what we shall read. (Perhaps the Senators would like to select our reading for us also.) We do not go, or it is not necessary for us to go, to the theater blindly, not knowing the theme of a picture or how it is treated—whether on war or some other subject. We have available to us as guides, in practically every newspaper and in many magazines, reviews of the films currently showing in the different parts of the country. We also hear by word of mouth the stories of pictures and their merits and demerits. The privilege is ours to select or to reject as entertainment a so-called war propaganda picture or a picture depicting war in any form.

If this committee is so particularly desirous of presenting pro-Nazi films, let them and the American First Committee, whose views they share and sponsor, form a company and make such pictures. There is no limitation put on the number of motion picture organizations that shall exist in the country nor the number of films any given locality may show.

But let these Senators remain true to American ideals and not resort to Nazi methods of intimidation and coercion and suppression of facts with which they disagree.

Preparedness Week

In order to create a spirit of unity, and as a means of focusing attention upon, and coordinating all our civil, national and allied defense efforts: I have been directing my plans and appeals to the Chief Executive, to Mayor LaGuardia, as Civil Defense Chief and to the American Legion national convention officials and others—to the effect that the President declare—and that we support and celebrate, a National and Civil Defense "Preparedness Week" and program—possibly extending from Navy Day, October 26, to Armistice Day. Thus, with every branch of the service as the Army, Navy, etc., the Civil Defense forces and other military and civic organizations participating, we as a Nation can advertise our equipment, our several purposes, our views, needs, etc., and altogether, show forth and accomplish a unified spirit and an "all out" defense effort in behalf of the nation, our allies and the cause of democracy generally.

As an important feature and possible climax of the several weeks of parades, speeches and other demonstrations—my plans call for our observing what would be advertised as the "Nation-wide" Unity-Peace and "Victory" Ball. Final suggestions: Out of a possible three or four millions of dollars accruing at least one million could be contributed to the USO.

Cut Crime Costs

Did anyone ever stop to consider that the price of crime can be cut to a fraction of its huge cost now? Or is anyone interested? How?

As "preventive medicine" is the answer to a hugh curative cost; so "preventive crime psychiatrics" is the answer to the huge "crime correction" costs, which accomplishes just the opposite. A better method intended deliberately to foster crime could never have been thought up than the jury system on one side, made up largely of jurors who are concerned with appearing more law-abiding than they really are "under the skin;" of opposing lawyers who desire to win "fair or foul," and often judges who do not lead exemplary lives. All this seeming hypocrisy is eating into the very vitals of this democracy.

So, if legislators would devote a little of their time that they do now to less important subjects, to "catching crime tendencies" of children and older students in their school years, there would be an accelerated crime decrease as the years pass.

Savage Pedestrians

I have just finished Mr. Latimer's interesting letter.

He suggests a drive on savage driving. I suggest a drive on savage pedestrians. It is almost impossible to drive down F Street on Saturday afternoons due mainly to pedestrians thinking the streets were made for them to walk in. When a light changes they still walk but in front of automobiles, practically daring a driver to hit them. If the pedestrian control law had been enforced continuously from the beginning quite a number of deaths could have been averted, because when any person is hit in his pocketbook he will usually watch his step and stick by the law.

Why not put underpasses at the corners downtown where the pedestrians could cross the street without looking, which they love; and several injuries and deaths could be averted? All the pedestrians have to do is keep their eyes open the same as the automobile driver does and there will be no danger of their being hurt.

How about a little cooperation from the poor submerged pedestrian?

Here's Why

With your permission I should like to reply to the letter of H. E. Rivers which appeared in your issue of September 21 under the caption "Why?"

Mr. Rivers asks why Americans are taxed to give to Britain under the lend-lease plan. The answer is that if Americans were not so taxed they would soon be in a position where they could not sustain a lend-lease plan for a single American dwelling.

Why, he says, worry about Japan? The United States has worried about Japan for the past 30 years, and if Japan is pulling Hitler's chestnuts out of the fire, after we have furnished and cooked them, Mr. Rivers is partly to blame for that condition of affairs.

Why, he asks, does not Britain have an army capable of some offensive action, and, if she has, why does she not make use of it? It is evident that Mr. Rivers knows little about military affairs or strategy.

Why fool ourselves about Britain even trying to pay us for anything, etc.? Obviously the dollar is far more important to Mr. Rivers than the saving of lives or the emancipation of slaves.

Why does Britain always wait for others to fight and win her wars for her? The war of the American Revolution was not won by Americans but by France, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India and practically all of the British Empire were not won by Britain's waiting for others to win them for her.

Why Britain, with the world's greatest commercial fleet, calls on us to deliver the supplies which we are giving (?) her is an elementary question.

"Britain is spending millions for propaganda in the United States." Is this a figment of Mr. Rivers' imagination?

We are anxious to stand with Britain on the Far Eastern issues, though less than four years ago she declined to stand with us, because the conditions of today are totally different to those of four years ago.

Mr. Rivers says: "Why not treat Great Britain as her own dominions are treating her?" Australian, New Zealand, South African, Indian and Canadian troops have received commendable notices in our newspapers.

"Why not let Britain draft her own dominions' millions . . . to make the world safe for Britains commercial dominance?" Is this what Great Britain is fighting for? A country in search of dominance would initiate a war. Britain did not commence nor cause the present war.

"Why should we be kicked and abused because we ask for the money for the just debts that Britain owes us?" Again the dollar, the important dollar.

"Let us spend our money on our own Army and Navy, making it the strongest in the world and let Britain win her own war." Mr. Rivers, you are not alone by any means with this idea. But it is an extremely dangerous one. You can have little knowledge of world affairs if you imagine that America, isolated, cut off from the rest of the world, is invincible.

Pedestrians Smash Autos

Some pedestrians seem to think they have a right to cross the street when the green light glows. And the way our walking public abuses and smashes fragile and unoffending automobiles is a shame! Pedestrians in Washington should realize that but two choices are open to them: either buy a car or rent a hearse!

The Post Impressionist

"Nature Morte"

"Vanya, you remember my friend, George Lebonievski, the painter, don't you?" Pavlick asked me.

"Yes," I replied, as noncommittally as possible.

"Well, he wants me to ask you please to come to see him."

"But why, Pavlick? He scarcely spoke a word to me the time we went round to see your portrait. Why should he want to see me?"

"Perhaps he did not talk much to you; George doesn't talk much to anyone. That is his Russian temperament. But he was looking at you all the time, and now he would be very happy to see you again."

"He wants me to come to see him, and I sit there, and he looks at me, and then I go away. Is that it?"

"Not exactly. To be truthful to you, Vanya, George wants to paint you."

"No, Pavlick," I said firmly. "I have no money to spend on a portrait. That is out of the question."

"But George doesn't want to sell it to you. He is going to have a show next spring, and he wants to hang your portrait there. Won't you just come and talk to him, anyway, Vanitchka?"

I have my share of vanity, I admit, although there is precious little for it to feed on; and to be asked to sit for a portrait is very flattering to one's vanity.

George had a studio on the off side of Beacon Hill, a small room but with excellent north light. He received us with what was for him great cordiality. "Enchante de vous voir," he assured me, giving me a firm, strong handshake. Pavlick he ignored, but he had some tea and fig newtons on a table, so Pavlick didn't mind that.

"I'm asking a great favor of you," he went on in French. "I want very much to do a portrait of you; the bones of your face have made a strong impression on me."

I murmured something; George ignored it. Even in French, George was direct and wasted no time on polite nothings.

"Since I understand from Pavlick Ivanovitch (here Pavlick smiled widely, revealing a whole fig newton in his mouth) that you read a great deal, it has occurred to me that perhaps it would not be asking too much to beg you please to bring your books and read here, say, three afternoons a week. In that way I could paint your portrait and still not take too much of your time. Will you do it?"

Accustomed as I was to Pavlick's circuitous approaches, this frontal attack left me bewildered. "Yes, I will," I agreed, and we straightway set to work agreeing on the afternoons that would be convenient for both of us. Since my schedule at Harvard had been so arranged as to leave Friday afternoons free for the symphony concerts, I also had Monday and Wednesday afternoons free. We agreed on them, George and I had a glass of tea, Pavlick had his fifth glass of tea, and we left.

"You have made a strong impression on George," Pavlick informed me. "I have never heard him talk so much since I have been knowing him. Let me see the bones in your face."

We stopped in the middle of Mount Vernon Street and Pavlick felt the bones in my face. Then he felt the bones in his own face. Pavlick snorted. "My bones are bigger than yours," he declared. "Who can see bones, anyway? Does he paint pictures of skulls?" It took a dinner at the Cafe de Paris to get him back into a good humor again.

I began the sittings the next week. "This is not going to be a formal, photographic likeness," George assured me. "You are to be completely at your ease. Just sit here in the light and read, and do not bother about keeping your head in the same position. Just forget you are posing for a portrait."

George worked away in silence. I read, and gradually I forgot about him and about the portrait. "What are you reading?" he asked at last. "Is it something French?"

"Yes, it's Raynaud's 'Life of Baudelaire'."

"Why don't you read it aloud? Then I can listen as I paint."

So I read Raynaud's story of that tortured soul, and George painted, and before we realized how quickly time was passing the light began to dim.

"Now let's have tea," George suggested, and we sat in the growing twilight and drank our tea, and George began to talk; not much, but a little. Before I left, I asked him if I might see what he had done that afternoon.

"No, please," he said. "I would prefer for you not to see it till it is finished. Excuse me, but I do not like for anyone to look at my painting while I am working on it. Afterwards it does not matter."

Thus, a month passed, and then two, and then three. I would bring over a book and sit and read to George while he painted for two or three hours, and then we would have tea, and then George would talk. A little at a time George would talk, and finally great floods of talk. There was no pity for himself as he told me how he left Russia after the Revolution "because I was just beginning to paint and that was not the place for it," how his wife deserted him in Paris because he bought canvas and colors when she wanted new shoes, how he worked long night hours in Boston so he could paint during the day.

Pavlick commented acidly on the length of time it was taking George to paint my portrait. "What a lot of bones you must have in your head, for George to be so long in painting them! In fact, your head must be almost all bone!"

I thought of what Pavlick said during the next afternoon. Still reading aloud, I rose and crossed over to the easel. George dropped his brush and stepped aside. On the easel was a nearly-completed abstraction. Leaning against the wall, face in, were six more abstractions.

"Which one do you intend to call 'Portrait of John Appleby'?" I asked.

"They are all to be called 'Nature morte'," George replied. He seized my hand. "But Vanya, if you only knew how lonesome it is to be painting here alone all the time!"

JOHN T. APPLEBY.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Wind That Is Blowing

SEASONED correspondents, who have been about the country recently or who have been talking to Congressmen who have come back to Washington from their districts, report that there has been a change in public sentiment—a change expressed by the Milwaukee convention of the American Legion and reflected by Senator Capper and Representative Dirksen.

LIPPMANN

This change has been in the making for some time. It is a change which it is difficult to measure correctly by such mechanical devices as the Gallup Poll. For the most significant thing about it is not the number of persons who have changed from disapproval to approval of this or that specific measure. The change is qualitative rather than quantitative, and the deepest element of the change has to do, I believe, not with the attitude of the great majority towards the war but with their attitude towards America. As regards the war there has been ever since the spring of 1940 a majority ranging roughly from three-fifths to four-fifths of the people who have rejected the idea that this country could be indifferent to a Hitler victory and have favored, therefore, a policy of total defense and of aid to the opponents of aggression. The numerical division of opinion has not changed much in the past year and a half. It is the temper of the majority that has been changing—changing, I believe, from a feeling that we must arm ourselves feverishly against a grave external danger to the feeling that it is the destiny of Americans to exercise the rights of a very great power—the right to a decisive part in shaping their future—and that it is tiresome to continue to be any longer a collection of nervous invalids, each, as Bernard Shaw said years ago, "a feverish selfish little clod of ailments and grievances complaining that the world will not devote itself" to making him happy.

AFTER 20 years the American people are emerging from what is undoubtedly the most un-American period in the history of the Nation. For the first time Americans have doubted themselves, have disbelieved in their own future, have felt themselves defeated, inadequate, and small. In 1917 America was victorious, secure, and predominant in the world, rich, strong and free at home. Twenty-two years later, by the disastrous spring of 1940, the Nation had been reduced to a position of the greatest danger in the outer world and at home it had been divided and bedeviled to a point where the simplest and most obvious measure of self-defense could be adopted only after prolonged and nerve-wracking dispute.

THESE were the bitter fruits of these 20 years during which, as by some terrible blight, Americans became obsessed with the things they feared and felt they could not do. The young men who have known America only in the years from 1920 to 1940 have seen little in public life that they admire. No wonder. They have seen a victorious Nation shrink from the responsibility of maintaining the peace it had helped to win. They have seen it shrink from the task of rebuilding the world. They have seen it plunge from a reckless boom into an insoluble depression. They have been told that the country was too stupid not to be outwitted by foreigners, too incompetent to compete with them in the open market, too weak to assert its rights and maintain them.

They have been told by Old Dealers that they must live behind a Chinese wall of protection and that if they moved to correct obvious social evils they would plunge the country into anarchy or into communism. They have been told by New Dealers that the way to get out of the depression they inherited from the Old Dealers was to produce less and less and to spend more and more. They have been told that the country was completed, in fact overdeveloped, and that there was no more opportunity for enterprise, and that men would get richer if they did less work and that the Nation would be better off if only it could manage to waste its surpluses. They were told there was too much of everything: too many workers, too many factories, too many machines, too many farms, and that by reducing, restricting and contracting energy and enterprise they might hope some day to arrive at a tepid, boring, listless thing called security in which, risking nothing, they might hope for a cheap car and an electric ice box to improve their souls.

I HAVE taken no Gallup Poll on the subject but I am not mistaken, I believe, in saying that something has snapped, and that Americans are feeling what William James meant when he shouted, "Fie upon such a cattleyard of a planet." I think that a cleansing gale has begun to blow across the land, and through the corridors and into the musty chambers where for two decades Americans have lived so luxuriously but so uneasily, so far beneath themselves.

The shock of the World War has unloosed it, but this wind is the very breath of the American spirit itself, proud, confident, and sure. Let it blow. For 20 years we have learned, as Pericles told the Athenians, how painful it is to a man of spirit "weakly to decline the trial." The air we have been breathing is not the American air but a stale, languid, anxious, irritating air in which no one has been really happy because no one has felt worthy of himself. An era, which those who come after us will not admire, is coming to an end, and that which alone is eternal in America lives on, the spirit of the men who made a new world knowing, as Pericles knew, that the secret of happiness is freedom and the secret of freedom a brave heart.

Proper Travel Books

"IT IS raining books on South America," says a Latin-American book reviewer, commenting upon this vogue in the United States. Latin-American periodicals are making an issue of it, and it is not a very favorable issue either. Those books, published in the States, sooner or later arrive down there and are analyzed, and comments are made. Eighty per cent of them are trash, written by travelers with superficial ideas and small knowledge of the subject. Too often authors are taking advantage of the interest South America is arousing in the States and are trying to capitalize by it.

The American public has a right to be properly guided as to what to buy when information and knowledge is being sought about our neighbors. The Government is spending millions to promote this interest. A carefully used "Recommended by the Office of Coordination" or "Recommended by the Pan-American Union" rubber stamp would be useful.

DR. Emilio Nunez Portuondo, vice president of the Foreign Relations Committee of the House of Representatives of Cuba, criticizes the American good-will campaign. He claims that Americans in charge of it should know more about South American traditions and psychology. Dr. Nunez, a former diplomat and representative to Pan-American conferences, compares our activities to those of totalitarians and finds our efforts lacking.

An excellent example of ignorance of Latin American psychology is featured when a well-inspired American writer, undoubtedly without the approval of the War or State Department, remarks that between 100,000 and 150,000 men in the American Army are ready to leave for South America. All this is based on the incoming news of Nazi activities in Argentina, Chile and other nations! The implication is certainly not a very flattering one to those nations or any self-respecting country. If they cannot cope with internal disorders themselves, any sort of disorders organized by professional Nazi stooges, they would not be fit to be called nations. One of the so-called "weaker" nations of South America, Bolivia, gave an example to the world of how to deal with Nazi propaganda not so long ago.

It is this sort of comment in the American press that "burns up" the South Americans. It just rubs them the wrong way.

AN official communique, received yesterday by the Argentine Embassy in Washington, confirms the fact that the sensational Nazi upheaval was, as South Americans will say, "mas el ruido que las nueces"—mostly noise but few nuts.

It has had the beneficial result of uniting the country against any future real disorders originated by Nazis and their sympathizers; the dangers have been emphasized and a thorough shake-up is taking place. It is a pity that the excellent army of Argentina should have received an undeserved black eye by the action of a few subaltern officers who very obviously did not represent any one organized group.

As is customary in South America when an important unit of the country has been severely criticized or irregularities have been uncovered, the head of the branch presents his resignation as a moral duty. Gen. Angel Zulosga, head of the Argentine Air Corps, was not ousted but resigned as soon as the scandal was known by him. It is a gesture that emphasizes the strict discipline existing in the Argentine army, but it cost that army the services of an excellent officer and an outstanding flier.

THE Red Cross drive taking place at present in Washington is being studied carefully by the newly appointed director of the Latin-American Bureau of League of Red Cross Societies, Senor Sergio Huneeus, of Chile.

Mr. Huneeus was formerly Charge d'Affaires and Counselor of the Embassy of Chile in Washington and in this capacity played an important part in the aid given by the American Red Cross to Chile during the fearful earthquake that destroyed part of southern Chile several years ago.

The American Red Cross is one of the American institutions best known in South America and has been an important factor in conveying the intense humanitarian feelings of the American people to those in the sister countries. Every nation of Latin America has its own Red Cross and it is proposed to bring to the States a group of representatives of the South America societies in order to study in Washington the procedure of the American Red Cross so that they may translate it into the program of their own societies.

Mr. Huneeus is about to return to South America, where his activities undoubtedly will contribute to strengthen inter-American relations under the banner of the universally known Red Cross. His main mission, however, is to correlate the organization of the various Red Cross societies in the Western Hemisphere, so that all would be prepared for any emergency. An interesting mission within Mr. Huneeus' work is the establishment of a coordination commission to organize relief in case of disasters within the hemisphere.

Two Ships A Day

Answer To Hitler's Challenge

SETTING for the Nation's shipbuilders a goal of two ships a day for the next two years, spokesmen for the Army, Navy and the Maritime Commission last night hailed their construction program as an American answer to "Hitler's challenge to our freedom of the seas."

They declared that Liberty fleet day today, when 14 merchant vessels will slide down the ways in the greatest mass launching since the World War, demonstrates the progress the United States is making in building a "bridge of ships" to the forces fighting aggression.

Fourteen ships will be launched today at yards throughout the Nation. Three of them are the first of the 312-ship "ugly duckling" fleet, emergency cargo carriers being built by the Maritime Commission. The others are being built on British order and under lend-lease authorization. The first to hit the water will be the Patrick Henry, to be christened at midday by Mrs. Henry a Wallace, wife of the Vice President, at the Bethlehem-Fairchild Shipyard in Baltimore.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, U. S. N., Ret., chairman of the Maritime Commission, said that despite the progress already made, "neither the shipworkers nor the commission are content."

"WE ALL REALIZE that more and still more merchant ships must be built to carry cargoes so vitally essential to the ultimate defeat of those aggressors who are threatening the liberty of all the peoples of the world," he said.

Land said he expected 20 ships of the Liberty fleet to be in service by the end of this year. For this fact, he paid tribute to "the foresight of the President and the Congress in taking action in 1936 to adopt a sound American merchant marine policy."

Land also noted:

"It is significant that this observance finds labor and management in the Nation's shipyards virtually in full accord in this supreme unified effort."

Maj. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory, the Army's Quartermaster general, described America's outlying bases as the "farflung sentinels of democracy."

"If they are to be truly effective, a chain of ships must be welded to link them to the mainland," he said.

The speeches were broadcast over a NBC network.

THE PRESENT PROGRAM of the Maritime Commission, Land said, contemplates the completion of approximately 1200 merchant ships between now and the end of 1943—two ships a day during the next two years. Pleading for utmost speed, the chairman declared:

"Every hour a ship is out of service, either delayed on the ways in the shipyard or idle in port, while vitally essential cargoes are undelivered, is a telling blow struck against the cause which America champions. Too many such hours—too many such blows—and the cause is lost."

A message from President Roosevelt will be broadcast at each launching today.

LAND SAID that the present Maritime Commission program calls for completion of 12 merchant ships between now and the end of 1943.

"That means the launching of an average of about two ships a day during the next two calendar years," he said.

An important purpose of the shipbuilding program, said Land, is to provide auxiliary ships for the Nation's armed forces. They will play a vital part in transporting men and supplies to farflung defense bases.

Besides the Patrick Henry, the other Liberty fleet ships that will be launched are the John C. Fremont, at Los Angeles, and the Star of Oregon, at Portland, Oreg.

PLANS for the Liberty ships call for an overall length of 441 feet 6 inches, displacement of 14,000 tons and cargo capacity of 9146 tons. Estimated base construction cost is $1,500,000.

To handle the program, 79 new shipways are being built in nine shipyards. More than half are already in operation.

The keel for the Patrick Henry was laid seven and a half months ago. When the vessel is launched today, the keel for another ship will be laid immediately.

The Gallup Poll

First Poll Returns Indicate Majority Approve Roosevelt's 'Shoot at Sight' Program

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 26.—First ballots returned in a Nation-wide survey of public sentiment on the Administration's new "shoot on sight" policy indicate a sizable majority approving that policy.

With American naval vessels scouring the Iceland sea lanes for the raider which sank the American-owned "Pink Star" and with the distinct possibility that the blood of American seamen may be spilled at any hour, the degree of public opposition, if any, to the new naval policy is of vital importance. The President announced the shoot on sight policy in his broadcast September 11. To test the public's reaction, the Institute began a Nation-wide poll approximately one week after the broadcast.

The issue which is being put to voters in every state of the Nation is as follows::

"In general, do you approve or disapprove of having the United States shoot at German submarines or warships on sight?"

Returns received to date show the following division of sentiment:

Approve	56%
Disapprove	34
Undecided	10

Complete returns of the poll will be announced in one week.

If the "undecided" vote in today's results is eliminated, the division of sentiment among the remainder with opinions is 63 per cent in favor of the shoot on sight policy, to 37 per cent opposed.

However, full returns are not in yet from the Midwest section, where sentiment has generally been found by the Institute to be less interventionist than in other areas. On the other hand, the isolationist attitude of the Midwest may be offset in the total result by ballots from the Southern States—the area which to date has been the most interventionist of all the sections.

Comparable War Opinions

Today's results, while not complete, comprise the first report of public sentiment on this vital issue. It is interesting to note that the percentages are in line with other recent expressions of opinion regarding the war.

For example, the American occupation of Iceland was approved by a majority of 61 per cent in an Institute survey in July—a figure not far different from that in today's survey. A smiliar proportion—56 per cent—favored the passage of the lease-lend bill earlier in the year.

Today's results form additional evidence to support the statement made by the Institute in August that the majority of voters are not opposed to some "shooting" if that is necessary to carry out the twin objectives of (1) bringing about Hitler's defeat, and (2) contributing to the defense of the United States. What the public has opposed, and still opposes, is our entrance into the war in a manner that will result in sending another A. E. F. to Europe on the scale of the 1917 experience.

Prayer For America

"A National Patriotic Prayer Week has been proposed for November 17 to 23 for the guidance and help of America in the present crisis."—News item.)

First of all, Oh Lord, make us realize fully that in any prayer we are making a supplication, not placing a rush order.

In this critical hour in our Nation's life, help us to the ways of strength and fortitude through the ability to see ourselves as You see us! Make it possible for us better to gird ourselves for whatever tests may lie ahead by the power of completely honest self-appraisal!

Rid us of petty impulses, the corroding curse of self-interest and the besetting sin of intolerance. Strengthen us for the task ahead by the ability to see how far we have strayed from the ways of our forefathers. Grant that there may be restored to us something of their burning faith.

May we be humble enough to know that, even as we don the cloak of righteousness and take the sword of the crusader, we are not without guilt. May we be helped by the realization that our ways have not made a pretty picture. May we become stronger through the knowledge that we have permitted the America we fight for now to become far too worshipful of the cheap and tawdry.

Make us realize that this is no hour for the casual mood or the superficial gesture. May we understand fully that this is no job in which cheers, back-slappings, music, confetti-hurling and the usual trappings of every-day endeavors shall suffice us.

Grant us the wisdom to understand that in this crusade cheap publicity, personal glorification and supercilious small talk are sickening and wholly unavailing.

Rid us, oh Lord, of the sickening, softening concept that the most comfortable road is the best, that any view of life is enhanced by a seat in a limousine and that success and eminence depend almost wholly on the spotlight and the camera men!

Fill us with disgust at the countless evils we have nurtured in days of peace: the love of personal glory, the quest of false gods, the pursuit of the main chance and the debasement of countless high ideals of traditional American life!

Help us to be brave without being boastful, indignant without being intolerant, resolute without being unfair. May we keep constantly in mind Thy commandment, "And the greatest of these is charity," charity in the sense of tolerance and compassion. Keep us strong, yet not truculent.

May we see the frothy things of our civilization and all the glittering superficialities for what they are and know again the capacity for disgust and chagrin. Make us understand that we are at the crossroads, that this may now be the hour of our destiny. We shall need all the elements of our character which easy living has sapped. Give us spiritual strength, restore our faith, clear our vision, grant us strength and the sustaining memories of our sturdy forefathers and their honest, God-fearing way of life in peace or war.

And, oh Lord, through Thy saving grace, make it possible for us to recover the old trail and follow it to the end of the passage with the words ever in our minds, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me: Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me." Amen.

This the remaining peace,
Nothing else certain.
Lies soft upon the ground,
Making earth's curtain.

All of the workers' pain
Is sliding sand.
Back to the earth again,
Under the land.

All that the mothers sing,
Nothing so holy.
Lies where green bayonets spring,
Smothering slowly.

Terrorists Sanctioned by Law

THERE may be some who think I am hysterical or guilty of deliberate misrepresentation in comparing the goons or pickets of the unions with the Brown Shirts of Hitler's earlier days in Germany. Possibly I am foresighted, but I think that is the worst criticism that can be made of this line of discussion. Up to now, those terrorists—and they are nothing else but—are not acting under the direct command of any elected national leader, but it can be demonstrated that they do act with the permission of the national Government and the encouragement of the Supreme Court.

PEGLER

Predictions are out of my line, but I will undertake to show that the goons who close factories by force and intimidation are a menace to the liberties of us all, including the very workers whose battles they profess to fight, and that they have committed their offenses knowing that the national Government will view them with a tolerant eye.

These people have assumed police powers, powers of censorship and the right to rule the private lives of union members, and they grow bolder day by day. They take it on themselves, at the command of unruly and ambitious bosses, to declare an industry unfair, even when the industry has no voice in a controversy, one way or another, and throw picket lines about the affected plants which are nothing but privileged mobs. They here present a threat of force against any American citizen who wants to go to his work and, meanwhile, by phone and personal visit, they carry the message of terror to the families.

WHEN employers have done that they have been condemned by these very same unions and by an overwhelming weight of public opinion, and I submit that such conduct is equally wrong on the part of a union, and the more dangerous now because it is committed with Government sanction. This persuades the workers who want to go to their jobs and the vast majority of the other citizens that their Government actually has sold them out to the mob leaders.

Not many of us really appreciate the arrogance of the unioneers.

A WAITRESS recently sent me a call from her local union to attend a meeting, at which the members would have the distinguished privilege of hearing an address by Mr. Ed Flore, the national president, who, in Miami and Chicago, turned the waitresses, bartenders and other saloon and restaurant help over to the mercies of notorious underworld characters, and a political speech by a boss of the local who was a candidate for a local public office. Failing to attend, they would be fined $5, and even though they had worked as late as 9:30 p. m. they had to come anyway or pay the fine.

In Chicago recently a member of a local union announced that one brother in his little lodge had been fined $25 for reading the Chicago Tribune, which had been placed on the index for publishing stories about the criminals in the union racket there. In Los Angeles a woman was warned that if she patronized a certain grocery her husband would be fired out of the union and thus blackballed from employment in any unionized occupation anywhere in the land of his birth and citizenship.

THESE are not horrible examples. They are typical instances and rather on the mild side, for they do not concern the real threats of death or injury, which are used to keep American citizens terrorized, or many cases of actual killing and beating by the goons.

It takes few men, given to violence and other methods of terror such as the German Brown Shirts employed, to whip into fearful submission a mass of other people many times their number. A union has no more right than the Ku Klux Klan or the Silver Shirts to resort to the club and the secret terror, but, nevertheless, we find that these goons enjoy a special privilege. Thus organized and trained and hardened in their ruthlessness, the goons of the unions constitute a terribly dangerous force which could be taken over by an unscrupulous brutalitarian in time of future emergency. Their power should be broken now, and by Congress, not by President Roosevelt.

U. S. Places Hotels Suspected As Axis Quarters On Blacklist

The United States is using its economic power even to strike at hotels and boarding houses in Latin America that are suspected meeting places of Nazi spies and agents, investigation revealed yesterday.

Names added to the "blacklist" of Axis firms in Latin America with which Americans are forbidden to do business include two hotels in Colombia, six hotels in Guatemala, a boarding house and a restaurant in Guatemala, a hotel in Haiti and two clubs in Mexico.

By order of the President, it is illegal to make payments to these organizations, to export to or import from them. Business with them is blacklisted altogether, in order to curb their influence.

The blacklist is aimed primarily, of course, at large business houses and news agencies in Latin America that have Axis connections.

But it also lists: Hotel Astoria, Barranquilla, and Hotel Continental, Medellin, Colombia; Astoria, Europa, Europeo, Manchen, San Refael and Weymann hotels in towns of Guatemala; Pension Moeller and El Quetzal Restaurant in Guatemala City; Kahn's Hotel in Petionville, Haiti; Club Aleman in Matamoros and Club Hipico Aleman, S. A., Mexico City, Mexico.

A chief reason for placing them on the list, it was learned, is that they are believed to be hangouts for spies, agents and other undesirable operatives friendly to the Third Reich.

Publicity is expected to hurt them more than cutting off any highly hypothetical trade they might have with the United States.

Minnesota Football Parties Begin Today

There will be dancing until 5 p. m., when a broadcast of the University of Minnesota-University of Washington football game will be heard.

Hungarian Leader Summons Magyars To 'Freedom Fight'

A movement to reestablish a free Hungary, "sovereign within, independent without," was announced yesterday by Tibor Eckhardt, Hungarian political leader who escaped from his homeland shortly before its affiliation with the Axis. He was interviewed here.

Eckhardt, president of the recently organized executive committee of "Independent Hungary," said that he had just issued a proclamation announcing the aims of his organization. Calling for the support of Hungarian nationals, persons of Hungarian decent, and Hungarians living in conquered sections of Europe, the proclamation declared:

"This fight for freedom shall be continued until the independence of Hungary and the constitutional liberties of her people have been completely restored."

"Not Responsible"

"Obviously, the Hungarian people are not responsible for the policy and acts of the present government," Eckhardt asserted. "Hungary is as much the victim of German aggression as all the other subjugated European nations."

The country did everything within her power to resist Nazi penetration, he said, but "had been systematically undermined and finally overrun by the Nazis."

"The present government of Hungary," he added, "formed under pressure of the German army marching through Budapest, does not carry out the will of the Hungarian people but has to execute Nazi commands."

Committees to conduct the movement for independence are being organized "in every free country where Hungarians reside," according to Eckhardt, and central headquarters are now being set up in New York. The executive committee at present includes, besides Eckhardt, John Pelenyi, former Hungarian Minister in Washington, Anthony Balasy, former counselor of the Hungarian Legation here and in London, and Victor Bator, former Hungarian bank attorney.

Hallowed Ground

Describing Hungary as "the land where every hill and field has been hallowed by the blood of generations fallen in defense of freedom," the group's proclamation read in part:

"The fate of our nation depends wholly upon the outcome of this fight for independence. The magnitude of the task, the supreme values at stake demand the united effort of all Hungarians wherever they may be. No difference in party or religious affiliations or of racial origin, no class distinction shall be allowed to separate us."

Crimea, Once Royal Play Spot, Now Land of Farms, Industry

In a long career of some 25 centuries, the Crimean Peninsula has been involved in many wars, but only in comparatively recent times has it developed economically, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic Society. German troops claim to have reached the northern edge of the peninsula.

"Jutting far south into the Black Sea, Crimea has a comparatively mild climate that especially appealed to northern peoples," says the bulletin.

"Because of its peculiar geographic position, Crimea has been washed by many waves of migration that have complicated the ancestry of its peoples. These inroads, too, caused fluctuations in population and prosperity. The peninsula was the scene of the Crimean War fought in the midnineteenth century by Russia on the one hand, and Great Britain, France and Turkey on the other. After that conflict the Crimea had 500 deserted villages.

"The bulging peninsula, little larger than Vermont, maintains a population of about 750,000 inhabitants. Roughly, it is diamond-shaped, attached to the Soviet mainland on the north by a strip three-quarters of a mile wide.

"Its irregular northeast coast fringes off into islands that enable a railroad to cross them between the Ukraine and the Crimea. These islands lie in a lagoon of the Sea of Azov, so shallow and stagnant as to merit its name of Putrid Sea.

"The railroad was largely responsible for raising Sevastopol from the ruins of the Crimean War to a modern city of 80,000 population. It is a major Soviet naval base. Feodosiya and Kerch, to the east, are the other principal Crimean ports. Inland Simferopol, the capital, is a university city and cultural center.

"Crimea has southeast coastal mountains which form a windbreak and are responsible for the mild climate of the shore. Royal residences, chateaux, and luxurious hotels were built in this long-popular Riviera of imperial Russia, where flowers bloom all year. Old palatial mansions now serve as rest houses for Soviet workers.

"The mountains consist of three ranges gradually rising to heights of 4,500 feet. Atop the southernmost range, which drops sharply toward the sea, is a tableland of Alpine pasture. Gorges and waterfalls add to the scenic beauty, while in the many valleys are Crimea's richest farms, with vineyards, orchards and forests.

"One-half the population is engaged in agriculture, mostly in the steppe land which covers four-fifths of the peninsula. This has become one of Russia's important wheat fields. Irrigation and scientific farming have turned onetime arid lands into productive acres, yielding in addition to grain sorghum, cotton, tobacco and other products. Much cattle and poultry are raised.

"The eastern extension of Crimea has iron mines whose once low-grade product has been improved. Phosphorus forms an important fertilizing by-product. Crimea also produces natural asphalt, manganese ores, borax, salt, sodium sulphate, iodine, bromine, cement and gypsum. It also has oil refineries, brickyards and tanneries.

"Crimea's central location in the Black Sea has made it for centuries a naturally convenient market for neighboring countries. In addition to sea-borne trade, the coastal regions long have supported rich and varied fisheries. In the east, several fish-salting cisterns, recently unearthed, are ascribed to the Roman period."

New South Carolina Senator Has Never Lost an Election

SENATOR MAYBANK

By A. F. Littlejohn
Associated Press Feature Writer.

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 26. Burnet R. Maybank, who gives up the Governor's office next month to become South Carolina's junior United States Senator, shattered long-standing traditions of this State in his climb up the political ladder.

The strapping 42-year-old Charleston businessman, scion of an old and wealthy family and a supporter of the Roosevelt Administration, is the first Charlestonian ever elected Governor by vote of the people.

He is also the first South Carolina man since the early years of this century to be elected Governor in his first race, and he is the first Governor to step directly into the Senate in this century.

Maybank never has lost a political race. After serving four years as an alderman, he was elected Mayor of Charleston in 1931. He pulled the city out of serious financial difficulties and was elected for a second term in 1935 without opposition. That was the first time in 28 years that a Charleston mayor had been unopposed.

In 1938 he was elected Governor, and this month he won the Democratic Senatorial nomination which is equivalent to election.

Maybank's unbroken string of victories cannot be attributed to the conventional arts of the politician. Although of a friendly nature, he is not a campaigner of the hand-shaking or baby-kissing type; he is not a rabble-rousing stump speaker, nor are his speeches polished oratorical efforts.

Maybank is constantly on the go. He makes many trips to Washington to confer with Federal officials on State matters. He conducts much of his official and personal business by telephone; he has been known to carry on two conversations simultaneously over different telephones. He speaks rapidly, so rapidly indeed that even expert stenographers sometimes have difficulty in keeping up.

He is a close personal friend of President Roosevelt and of Associate Justice James F. Byrnes, whose unexpired Senate term Maybank will serve out.

Maybank is the fourth man to fill the junior Senator's seat this year. First was Byrnes, who was elevated to the Supreme Court last July. Next was Alva M. Lumpkin, named by Maybank to succeed Byrnes. Lumpkin died in August, shortly after taking office. The Governor then appointed Roger C. Peace, Greenville publisher, to serve until mid-October.

Maybank's election gives South Carolina two cotton experts in the Senate. His colleague will be the veteran Ellison D. Smith, who has been known as "Cotton Ed" since he first took office in 1909, because of his efforts by legislation to help the cotton farmers.

Smith is a cotton planter and therefore his knowledge of the industry and its problems is that of the grower. Maybank is a broker and exporter, and consequently he sees the problems of the industry more with the perspective of the businessman than of the farmer.

Maybank entered the cotton business immediately following graduation from the College of Charleston in 1919, after an interim of service in the naval forces, as top man of his class.

In 1923 he married Elizabeth Myers, daughter of the late United States District Judge Frank K. Myers. They have three children, Burnet, 17, a freshman at The Citadel in Charleston; Roberta, 15, a student at Arlington Hall, Washington, and Elizabeth, 11.

Until he became Governor, Maybank was chairman of the South Carolina Public Service Authority, a State agency set up to develop with the aid of Federal funds a $60,000,000 power and navigation project on the Santee and Cooper Rivers in lower South Carolina.

What to Match

"I HAVE neither the time nor the money," writes a Washington business woman, "to change to a different handbag every day." Then she asks if there isn't some rule to tie to in choosing accessories. Should bags match shoes? Can a suede bag be worn with leather shoes or kid gloves?

The answer to these questions is summed up in one simple handy guide—Whatever the color and material of the shoes, the bag as well as the gloves should match. One buyer suggests that if a woman can have only one set of accessories, leather is the wisest selection—rather than suede. Since shoes are supposed to match the basic color of the coat, it is assumed that gloves, handbag, shoes and coat blend as to color and material.

Storing Swim Suits

A PRACTICAL-MINDED woman says that at last she found a wool swimming suit this last summer that she likes. She wants to know how to preserve it until next season.

With a little extra care, it is very easy to make a swim suit last from one summer to the next. The most important bit of care is thorough washing in luke warm soap suds. More than likely, the suit was last worn in a pool of chlorinated water or a muddy river bed, and it should be cleansed of anything injurious to the wool. After washing, a though rinsing is most necessary to remove the alkali of the soap. After the suit is dry, wrap it in tissue paper—or better yet, newspaper. To ward off the moths, wrap up a little camphor in the suit too. The same care is suggested for cotton, silk or rayon suits, as there are insects which prey on these fabrics too.

If you have found a bathing cap you like, similar care will also make it last until next summer. Rinse the cap thoroughly from any chlorine or salt water and dry it inside and out—without heat. Use talcum powder to dust it and wrap it inside and out in tissue paper. Be certain it is put away in a cool dry place where there is no strong heat or light.

What About Nylon?

THE LINGERIE situation is still a question in the minds of women. Recently the fashion editor was asked what progress has been made with nylon slips and whether they are practical.

Earlier in the season it was noted that department stores already were carrying nylon slips. At present, however, most stores are waiting for overdue shipments to replenish their stock. Buyers say they would be most practical—if the fabric were only more readily available.

Some criticism as to the price and plainness of the nylon slip has been overheard. Buyers point out that $5 is not too much to pay for a slip, if it is going to have the lasting qualities of nylon hose. Just as in the case of hose, nylon slips too, are more easily laundered and if done according to instructions, they do not have to be ironed. They may not be as pleasant to the touch at first as other fabrics, but then, wearers had to get used to nylon hose too.

As to the matter of simplicity in tailoring of nylon slips, the solution is only logical. The slips are not trimmed because decoration would only make them more expensive. They do have all the newest style features, however,—deeper bustlines, fitted midriffs and full, yet slim appearing skirts. Nylon slips are especially advised for the traveling bride as they muss very little and do not show wrinkles.

Cosmetic Craze Affects Women Of Remote Mexican Villages

Leaders Active in War Relief and Civic Projects

By Genevieve Reynolds.

MODERN MEXICAN women may be a little slow in politics—they're still fighting for complete suffrage—but they don't miss any cosmetic tricks. Even in remote sections of that country, recently I saw barefoot Indian girls with permanent waves and brightly lipsticked lips.

Plebian or aristocrat—all Mexican women like eye makeup. The still sheltered society woman has perfected the art. So deftly does she apply it that only mascara is discernible. However, I observed that many of the working girls use blue mascara heavily on their thick, long, black eyelashes. (May be a Duchess of Windsor influence.) A few underline their lower eyelids with black or blue eyebrow pencil.

Broader Interests

Not only does the Mexican woman today, possess a keen style and makeup awareness, but her interests are becoming much broader. For she is diligently "Bundling for Britain;" raising money for the Allied cause in general, promoting the good neighbor policy, fighting for Democracy. Also, she is as busy as a beaver working for civic and educational improvements. But first she looks to her home and family.

The most outstandingly progressive woman in Mexico today is brilliant Senora Amalia Castillo de Ledon, of Mexico City. Wife and mother, clubwoman, society leader, playwright and politician, she is also a great beauty. Men refer to her as "charming and unusual."

"Why unusual?" I asked a prominent Mexican government official.

"Mexican women," he replied, "are still very much in the background. They are essentially 'homebodies' with their interest centered in their homes and families. It is unusual here for a woman to have as many successful interests and to be so attractive as Senora de Ledon. She happily combines a career with a home. Besides being intelligent, she is most charming."

Member of Board

Senora de Ledon was recently appointed the only woman member of the Consulting Board of Mexico City. Headed by the governor of the city, the board decides on all problems pertaining to the improvement of the city. As member of this powerful board, the alert blue-eyed Senora wields a wide influence for her sex.

As president of the new League for Democracy, which she organized in June, 1940, Senora de Ledon works day and night for the solidarity of Democracy in the Americas. "All the Mexican woman are united in this movement," she said. She pointed out that the League for Democracy was not organized to settle internal troubles in her native land, but as a shield against the spread of totalitarian governments throughout the world. When the Inter American Conference was held in Washington last spring, Senora de Ledon represented the Inter American Committee of Mexico. She expects to visit Washington again next month.

She's An Envoy

When her government sends a woman representative to Latin American countries on any sort of mission, this soft spoken, tactful woman, who is the friend of poets, artists, and newspaper scribes, is usually selected for the job. Recently she traveled and lectured throughout Mexico. This time she was a member of the Cultural Mission, selected by the Mexican government.

With all her numerous charities, club and political activities, and social duties, Senora de Ledon finds time to write a hit play. Her best known play, "When the Leaves Fall Down," was presented 100 times consecutively. Most recent of her works to receive wide acclaim is "The Biography of Outstanding Women in Mexico." She is the only woman playright in Mexico to achieve pronounced success in that field.

In addition to her other accomplishments, Senora de Ledon, mother of two sub-debutante daughters, runs her spacious household with apparently no effort. Her husband, a man of profound culture, stands by her side to offer encouragement and spur her on to new laurels.

Weekly Facial Renovates Skin

Hollywood, Calif.—A bit drying to the skin but certain to make it white and clear is the treatment used by Mildred Coles as a weekly facial. Mildred fills a basin with steaming water, holds her head over it while the steam opens the pores of her skin. After her face has perspired for several minutes, she massages a bland soap into her skin and lets it dry in a tight mask. After rinsing and blotting her face she works a light cream over it to restore the natural oils. Black-heads and blemishes will disappear after a few facials, according to the pretty Warner Bros. actress.

ArrangeFlowers Artistically

WHAT every woman wants—flowers in the home! What every woman doesn't know, though, is what miracles can be wrought with a few cents and a few flowers (the year round) when you know a little about flower arrangement.

The lady who spends gobs of money at the florist may spoil her effects by wadding her flowers in tight masses. You take a handful of blossoms and, following the simple tree plan in our diagram, create a little masterpiece.

The trunk of the tree is the vase. Note that the tree itself is thickest where the branches start to spread and that it diminishes as it grows up and out.

So you place your rounder, plumper blossoms (called "target" flowers) at the bouquet's base—perhaps dahlias, asters.

For the up-reaching "branches" you may use "spike" flowers such as gladioli.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Flower Arrangement Made Easy," to the New York Office of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Film Stars Sometimes Libeled, Often Flattered by Photos

By Ida Jean Kain

SOME of the prize remarks in interviews—which can't be printed if the actress is to be taken seriously—are so diverting that I believe I'll pass them along to you minus the identification tags.

One line that sticks in my memory was tossed off by a screen beauty while outlining what was supposed to be her health program. I had asked how she managed to relax and get her beauty sleep after a tense day at picture making. And she said, "Why I just take a sleeping pill."

And what do you suppose one of the real glamour girls told me when I asked the size dress she wears? Well, here it is! "Really, I don't know," she said, aloofly. "I have never had a dress that was not custom made." "That's just dandy," I couldn't resist firing back, "Shall I put that in the story? It sounds so snobbish." But to her credit, she climbed right down off her high horse and we got to be pretty good pals.

Surprisingly Frank

One of the most charming actresses I have ever met was almost surprisingly frank. I requested her measurements in the usual order and she said: "Why, I am really flat-chested. I pin things on."

Diet is a stock subject, and I find that a number of the movie actresses have their own ideas—some of them quite original. One star told me earnestly that she drinks cucumber juice at intervals during the day "because it is far superior to milk." And in the time that remained for the interview I wasn't able to convince her otherwise.

A hard-working and highly intelligent actress suggested that dieting to reduce could be vastly simplified by taking either half of a grapefruit or grape fruit juice at the end of a meal "to cut the fat." But I believe I managed to nip that theory—nobody has ever yet succeeded in adding to what she has and getting less.

Concerning Calories

The Hollywood conception of a calorie is colossal. One starlet informed me brightly that a single peanut contains 1000 calories! Just to keep the books straight: It takes two cupfuls to count that many calories.

As you may suspect, some of the girls are not as pretty as their pictures. But some of them are even prettier. That goes for little Susan Hayward, who has the most beautiful red hair I have ever seen. It is also true of the exquisite Anita Louise, whose skin is like rose petals. The British star, Anna Neagle, is far lovelier off-screen. Ruth Chatterton is more beautiful in person today than she ever was in pictures.

Myrna Loy is one star who looks exactly the same on the screen. I bumped into her one day and automatically said "Hello" before I thought. She hello-ed right back and we were a block apart before I realized I had just scraped a speaking acquaintance with Mr. America's favorite wife. She is as natural and unassuming as your next-door neighbor.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Mary Haworth is now on vacation. Her column will be resumed Monday. In the meantime, letters addressed to Miss Haworth's attention will be held unopened, to await her consideration upon her return to her desk.

Your Own Facial

Hollywood, Calif.—Steam, tincture of green soap, astringent and a little rubber paddle help Brenda Marshall to give herself a weekly facial. She lathers her face with the soap, then runs steaming water into the wash bowl, holding her head down over it and making a canopy with a bath towel. She rinses her face, steams it again, rinses with luke warm, then cold water, and finally douses astringent over her face and pats it gently but briskly with the paddle.

Treat Enameled Pots With Care And They'll Last

The pleasant rattle of pots and pans is a welcome signal of bustling activity in the kitchen when you're hungry.

But care should be taken that the pleasant "rattle" is not produced by careless handling of your kitchen utensils.

Here's a tip: treat your new enameled pots and pans with as much consideration as you would your china or glass and they will last a lifetime.

The thing to remember, first of all, in caring for porcelain enameled ware, is that enameled ware is glass—molten glass fused on steel. That's why it is sanitary in appearance and in use, and so easy to clean and keep clean.

Remembering this, therefore, follow these simple rules:

Don't strike your porcelain enameled ware with hard blows. Its surface is nonporous and flint-hard, made to resist punishment, but naturally it cannot for long withstand banging against the kitchen range or faucets, dropping to the oflor or hammering with a metal spoon.

Don't clean your porcelain enameled ware with gritty substances. If food boils dry and sticks, soak it off. This not only saves your pots and pans but saves you work. For ordinary cleaning, simply wash your enameled ware in warm water with a good grade of soap.

In cooking with porcelain enameled ware, use a low flame. Save your fuel. Enameled ware utilizes heat efficiently.

Wall Paper, Gay and Fantastic, Provides 'Escape' From Present

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

IN TIMES like these, wallpaper is an illusive panacea for grim thoughts . . . a few rolls and you can create a new order to your own taste. For though realism has jolted literature and painting, forcing upon our attention the facts of life, in wall paper the flowers are still fantastically beautiful, the figures romantic, the scenes like gentle dreams. At the other end of the scale, modern fantasy includes fish and trees that never were, scenes made up out of whole cloth. Maybe it's escape . . . but today's world needs some escape, so we give you wall paper.

The florals, most usable and decorative of all designs, include small sprigs and huge over-scale bouquets. Though pastels and clear high colors are shown, the smarter looking papers are in mellowed tones, reflecting the Williamsburg and Federal influence. Flowers entwined with shells, birds, beads, feathers are lovely and spectacular.

Fruit designs for wallpaper recall old-time dining room pictures . . . remember? New and smart looking they are when used as medallions on a dining room paper. One rather modern fruit paper has apple trees and apple pickers splashed in fresh reds and greens against a starchy white background. The most sophisticated fruit paper are panels of Chinese fruits in stencil effect on silver tea box squares. Incidentally all the traditional Chinese papers are enjoying a revival of interest, partly because of China in the news, partly because of the Metropolitan Museum China Trade exhibit.

Stripes are offered in all sorts of versions—but the shap unshaded stripes have the most style—but there are narrow stripes, too, and appealing floral stripes. Polka dots look very new this year, and scenics include modern pastorals, traditional views framed in scrolls or striped backgrounds, and Chinese all-over scenes. Medallion papers in big conventionalized motifs look wonderful now—the kind you used to see in old houses with the same muddy colors, those dull off-greens, the dingy yellow-browns.

$25,000 Jade Set Is Tribute To Chinese Craft

Despite war and destruction, the painstaking craftsmen and jewelers of modern China continue to produce masterpieces of beauty and art. Concrete evidence of this may be seen in the precious jade dressing table set on display at one of the local department stores tomorrow and next week. The set is valued at $25,000 and was made to order for an internationally known cosmetic firm.

The order for the 14 pieces was placed three years ago . . . and the dressing table set, which is the only one of its kind in existence, was hand-carved and sent to America piece by piece. Comprising this beautiful set of jade and gold are cosmetic jars, tray, mirror, powder box, two lipsticks (one for daytime and the other for evening).

Ancient Chinese made many wondrous things for the imperial lady's boudoir. Delicate containers for sachet were so delicately carved that only exquisite lace can be compared to them. The same dexterous tracery distinguishes the jars in this new jade set made of translucent emerald green, known as feita'i or Kingfish feather green.

14 Women, Headed by Mrs. Wallace, Will Launch Liberty Ships Today

Transcribed Address by President To Be Heard at Bethlehem Ceremony

By Carolyn Bell

Four thousand years ago—as a propitiation to the gods of the elements—ships were christened, and today Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, will crack a bottle of champagne against the prow of the streamlined Patrick Henry as it slips into the water.

Headed by Mrs. Wallace, 14 women sponsors will christen as many new merchant ships—all over the country—today, designated as Liberty Fleet Day. With bands playing and flags flying the Patrick Henry is scheduled to slide down the ways at the Bethlehem-Fairfield yards in Baltimore at 12:30 o'clock.

This is the first time the pretty wife of the Vice President has wielded the champagne bottle at a launching and she admits she is "thrilled" at the prospect. Mrs. Wallace will be accompanied by Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss Minister, who is her sister-in-law. The Vice President will not be able to attend and their son and daughter are out of town.

Luncheon Follows At Belvedere Hotel

A luncheon will follow the launching at the Hotel Belvedere and among those who will attend are Senator George Radcliffe, of Maryland, who will speak; the chairman of the Maritime Commission, Admiral Emory S. Land—he, too, will say a few words—and A. B. Homer, president of the Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyard.

By way of transcription President Roosevelt will make an address at this launching. A novel note will be introduced when Admiral Land attaches a note to the President on the leg of a carrier pigeon. The bird is then expected to wing his way homeward to the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J.—where the message to the Chief Executive will be sent by wireless.

On hand for the launching of the Patrick Henry will be four descendants of the patriot for whom the ship was named. Up from Brookville, Va., will come his great grandson, D. Y. Henry. John William Fontaine, great great grandson who makes his home in North Carolina, will attend, as will Mrs. J. P. Quarles, of Richmond, great great great granddaughter, and Mrs. Harold Mays, the sixth generation descendant.

Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of the Georgia Senator, will break a bottle of champagne over the S. S. Surprise today in Chester, Pa. Last evening Mrs. George was feted at a buffet supper by former Gov. and Mrs. O. Max Gardner. The party was given in the East Room of the Mayflower and following it Mrs. George, her hosts, and most of the guests went to Union Station where they entrained for Chester.

James F. Byrnes And Wife Attend

Guests included Associate Justice and Mrs. James F. Byrnes, former Senator and Mrs. William E. Brock, of Tennessee; Mrs. Josiah W. Bailey, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Representative and Mrs. Eugene E. Cox, Representative and Mrs. Luther A. Johnson, Col. and Mrs. Edmund W. Starling, Judge and Mrs. N. A. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Morrison.

Still others in the company were Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Daniel, Mr. and Mrs. Will Vereen, of Moultrie, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar B. Dunlop, of Gainesville, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Marshall, of Charlotte, N. C.; Mr. and Mrs. John Haynes and Mrs. John Franklin, of New York; Mrs. Wilton Lambeth, Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Alvord, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Staetson, of New York; Ensign Joseph Marcus George, son of Senator and Mrs. George, and his friend Lieut. Allen Waggaman, of Oklahoma.

Shortly after Mrs. Wallace and Mrs. George christen "their" ships, Mrs. Sheridan Downey, wife of the Senator from California, will christen the John C. Fremont, another Liberty ship, in the yards of the California Shipbuilding Co. in Los Angeles.

Guests Give Robert's Home Hotel Air

"Washington has a new hotel—just now when it's needed most," Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer said the other day. She was talking about Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert's house, which has been filled with guests ever since the Roberts moved in a few days ago from the Mayflower Hotel.

Several parties have also taken place at the Robert's home the past week, and last night another gala dinner went on the calendar there. Guests of honor were James H. R. Cromwell, former U. S. Minister to Bulgaria, and his sister, Mrs. Lionel Atwill. Others there were the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, former Senator Henry F. Ashurst, Mrs. Robert Danford, Mrs. Drew Pearson, Irving Harris, of New York, and David Cohn, author of "The Good Old Days." Mr. Cohn is the latest guest to move in to the Robert Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert will be in the party going over to Baltimore today for the christening of the Patrick Henry. They will be guests of Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, and others in the party will include the Undersecretary of the Interior and Mrs. John J. Dempsey and George Vournas.

Mrs. Watson Entertains Music Group

Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, wife of the Military Aide to the President, entertainment yesterday at tea in her apartment at the Kennedy-Warren in honor of the committee of the Chamber Music Guild. Mrs. Watson is president of the committee and especially interested in the work of the guild because of her own brilliant career as a concert pianist.

Receiving with Mrs. Watson in the drawing room of the apartment was Mrs. Marcel Ancher, the manager of the guild. Mrs. Watson was gowned in a blue and white floor-length silk crepe print, which effectively set off her honey blond hair. With it she wore a diamond clip pin at the neckline and a shoulder corsage of tea roses. Mrs. Ancher wore a black crepe frock fashioned on princess lines, and a small pancake hat to match, trimmed with red roses and accented with a snood.

In the dining room the tea table was centered with a low bowl of red rosebuds and flanked with tall ivory tapers in silver holders. Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., of Annapolis, former president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, whose skill as a presiding officers always showed up smoothly at conventions in Constitution Hall, is writing a course in parliamentary procedure for the staff assistant's manual to be issued by the American Red Cross.

The manual, which will come off the press in October, will be distributed among the more than 3000 chapters of the Red Cross over the Nation. Mrs. Robert's contribution to the book will point out correct procedure in conducting committee and chapter meetings, in making notions and otherwise being "in order."

Mrs. Robert came over from Annapolis recently and spent more than an hour going over the material with Miss Minnie E. Harman, assistant to the director, special volunteer services, Red Cross. The manual will include also a course in telephone manners, under the title, "The Voice of the Red Cross."

DIET RESULTS—Slim, blond Mrs. Elsie Halstrom Dawson, of the food and nutrition section, Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, confessed, the other day, that she had been one of the "guinea pigs" for a series of new low-cost menus.

"I was more than satisfied after a week on the diet. In fact, I gained 3 pounds," she told an audience at the volunteer defense rally of Washington Professional Panhellenic Association.

She pointed out that the Bureau of Home Economics' new publication, "Planning Diets by the New Yardstick of Good Nutrition," translates the dietary allowances recommended by the National Research Council into actual diet plans at three different income levels. "These diets were not just planned on paper. They were kitchen-tested, dining-table tested and tested by eating," she added.

Farm and Garden Unit Hears Chilean Official

By Lucia Giddens

How the government of Chile is raising the standard of living among agricultural laborers was described—with piquant accept—by Senorita Graciela Mandujano, of Santiago, yesterday at the luncheon of the Capital Division, Woman's National Farm and Garden Association.

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, was guest of honor at the meeting and had an opportunity to try out phrases from her current Spanish lessons, in greeting Senorita Mandujano and another visitor, Senorita Susana Largula of Argentine.

Senorita Mandujano, who is assistant director of the Institute for Rural Information, Department of Agriculture, in Chile, was principal speaker at the meeting at Tilden Gardens Apartments.

"The changes made in our country in the last decade are so great that our grandparents would hardly know us. We are so busy changing, that the tempo of our life is almost as fast as yours," Senorita Mandujano declared.

Changes are taking place in the peon class, "who do the work of the country," and among the well-to-do people who do not have to work, she said.

Women who have not had to work in the home got "disconnected with the kitchen," she said. "Women in wealthy homes seldom visited the kitchen. But now our women are learning it is something to be proud of—to be a good housekeeper."

About 45 per cent of the country's population is agricultural laborers, "and only a small percentage of them have known how to read and write, or have used the knowledge if they had it," Senorita Mandujano said.

"My office in two years has received thousands of letters from almost illiterate persons asking for information; thousands of letters asking for books. The people are just crying to be educated," she added.

Government Finances Equipment Purchases

"The government of Chile is selling beehives, goats, poultry, sewing machines and looms to the people, with a long-range plan of paying for them.

"To give them self respect and a sense of responsibility, we are selling these things instead of giving them to the people. We seldom have any late payments. We tell the people that the government can not carry on this work, providing such tools for their neighbors, if they do not pay promptly. We always get letters assuring us that the payment is coming, as soon as they get the money," she said.

Mrs. Arthur T. Esgate, president of the division, who presided at the luncheon, pointed out that the association this year will stress the developing of greater understanding among women of all the Americas.

The organization, which cultivates relationships between rural and city women, "wants to extend our efforts across boundaries to women in all countries of this hemisphere," Mrs. Esgate said.

Senorita Mandujano has been on a speaking tour in the United States for three months, and her government has allowed her to remain another month, she said yesterday.

Senora de Michels At Speaker's Table

Sherman, vice president for Virginia; Mrs. Jay W. Johns of Charlottesville, Va., past president of the Capital Division; Mrs. Bartlett F. Johnston of Baltimore; Mrs. E. O. Speaker Advocates Spanish Classes In Grade Schools

The teaching of Spanish in grade schools of this country was suggested as a step in better inter-American understanding by Paul Murphy of the Pan American Union staff in an address Thursday for the Adelphian Club.

A sound knowledge of Latin-American nations as the basis of hemispheric solidarity and mutual good will was urged in his address at the Pan American Union. He is in the special events division.

The speaker stressed the fact that inter-American cooperation is necessary to meet the present threat and that economic difficulties must be overcome. Though coffee, sugar, cacao, manganese, tin and other products are imported in large quantities by the United States, this nation must await the development of complementary products such as rubber, timber and fibers, and the industrialization of parts of Latin America to be able effectively to meet European competition.

LIBERTY FLEET DAY

SEPTEMBER 27, 1941

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, climaxes an eventful week in American naval and marine history. The first of the Liberty Fleet ships is to be launched at Fairfield, Baltimore, at 12:30 P.M. (E.S.T.). Before the day is over 14 vessels, under the auspices of the U. S. Maritime Commission, will have slid down the ways.

The launchings will take place at eleven ports on two oceans and the Gulf of Mexico, from Quincy, Massachusetts, to Seattle, Washington.

MORE THAN 50,000 TONS IN FOUR DAYS

The week is a particularly eventful one for Bethlehem. Within four days its shipbuilding operations will have launched more than 50,000 tons of vessels: The battleship Massachusetts slid into the water on September 23, and on Liberty Fleet Day Bethlehem yards see the launching of the first Liberty Fleet vessel, S.S. Patrick Henry; the tanker, Sinclair Superflame, built for Sinclair Refining Company; and the cargo ship, James McKay, built for Lykes Brothers Steamship Company. Bethlehem has 76 vessels now building for the U. S. Navy. In addition, 93 merchant ships are scheduled for the Maritime Commission and other owners.

Bethlehem will have launched 41 vessels during the current calendar year. This is but the beginning of the "bridge of ships." The schedule for the Bethlehem-Fairfield Yard alone calls for the launching of one ship a week during 1942, and the combined yards will complete a ship on the average of every 3½ working days, including heavy naval vessels.

Builders Protest Ceiling on Prices

$6000 Limit Set by OPM Unsuited To Washington, Contractors Assert

A meeting of almost a thousand representatives of the Washington construction industry and affiliated trades authorized a seven man committee to seek the elimination of the $6000 sale price ceiling placed on housing construction by the OPM last Monday.

The new regulation, which would deny priorities on building materials for houses costing more than $6000 or renting for more than $50 a month, was described by the builders as not taking into account conditions existing in Washington.

Speakers from the floor, during an hour and a half of discussion, declared that much of the demand in this city was for houses costing more than the amount specified. The demand for defense housing in many cities, they said, was made by an influx of factory workers and skilled tradesmen. In Washington, however, the term "defense worker" includes many high-ranking executives, Army and Navy officers and professional experts who refuse to take accommodations in the $50 a month class, they said.

Furthermore, one contractor declared, there are many small builders who construct only five or six houses a year and those in the higher priced brackets. The new regulation would force these men out of business, it was asserted.

A letter read at the session from Rufus S. Lusk, local real estate statistician and editor of the Washington Business Review, stated that the ruling "will cripple the lumber, cement, brick, glass, insulation, roofing and stone business," which are not affected by priorities.

Several speakers, including Lawrence Williams, chairman of the District Defense Housing Committee, urged that the builders recommend to OPM that a maximum amount of critical materials permissible for any one dwelling unit be set rather than the price ceiling.

Williams said that by this method, substitute materials could be used, and higher priced dwelling units constructed to meet the demand of higher-salaried Government and service employes without using any more critical materials than would ordinarily go into a $6000 house.

The committee set up last night is made up of Fred A. Smith, of the Washington Board of Trade, Arthur B. Heaton, of the Washington Builders Congress, Charles C. Koones, of the Washington Real Estate Board, Leon Chatelain, jr., of the Washington chapter of the American Institute of Architects, Francis G. Addison, jr., of the District Bankers' Association, William N. Payne, of the District Building and Loan League, and Waverly Taylor, of the Operative Builders Association.

Taylor, who presided at the meeting in the United States Chamber of Commerce auditorium, said that each of the represented organizations would be asked to elect two men to serve on a permanent committee to study ways of cooperating with priority demands without necessitating the price ceiling.

A Step Forward

1-Cent Milk Yardstick Is Agreed On

Another step toward qualifying Washington's needy, undernourished children for a Federal one-cent milk program was taken yesterday.

A special subcommittee of the D. C. Nutrition Committee approved an eligibility yardstick for recommendation next Tuesday to the city-wide group charged with the responsibility of arranging the milk project.

Headed by Mrs. Lucian Jordan, health chairman of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, the subcommittee did not make public its report. Its job was principally to determine what is the Capital's lowest third income group.

To be eligible for penny half-pint bottles, children must be dependent upon public or private relief or members of "lowest third" families. The requirement is laid down by the Department of Agriculture, sponsor of relief milk programs throughout the country.

Robert L. Haycock, acting superintendent of schools and chairman of the general committee named last week by the Board of Education to prepare plans for the milk project, announced the appointment of Ross Haworth to the group. Haworth was named District WPA administrator this week.

Sleuths Cork Soldiers Home Bootleg Source

They had to disguise themselves as disabled service men, enter the institution as patients and get thrown into the guard house to do it, but two Washington detectives succeeded in tracing to its source the bootleg whisky which had been finding its way into the Soldiers' Home.

The detectives—George Cooper and Joseph F. Landman, both of the Twelfth Precinct—finally wormed their way into the confidence of some inmates of the guard house and one day escaped with them.

The trail led to two houses near the home. They were raided Thursday after the detectives bought whisky with marked money, and yesterday six Negroes were haled into Police Court on charges of illegal possession and sale of whisky and maintaining a disorderly house. They demanded a jury trial and were released under $000 bond.

Cooper and Landman carried out their assignment in collusion with officials of the home. Both masqueraded as soldiers from Fort Benning, Ga. Cooper feigned a dislocated hip and walked with a cane. Landman, admitted to the home for treatment of an injured back and a "distorted mind," likewise played his role convincingly.

Funeral Rites Set Monday for Dr. Taliaferro

Funeral services for Dr. Thomas Hardy Taliaferro, 70, dean emeritus of the faculty of the University of Maryland, will be held Monday morning at 11 in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Washington. Interment will be at Old Ware Church in Gloucester County, Va.

Dr. Taliaferro

Dr. Taliaferro died Thursday night at his home in the Concord Apartments, 1816 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, following an illness of several weeks.

He was born at Jacksonville, Fla., March 22, 1871, and was educated at Virginia Military Institute and at Johns Hopkins University, from which he received his degree of doctor of philosophy.

From 1904 to 1907 he was assistant statisical editor of the Census Bureau and then joined the University of Maryland as professor of civil engineering. Idle Tank Cars Total but 5192, Ickes Declares

Latest figures show 5192 railway tank cars—and not 20,000—idle and available to haul gasoline and oil to the East, Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes announced yesterday.

The findings of an inventory which he made public conflicted with the statement made recently to a Senate investigating committee by J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads. Pelley testified 20,000 tank cars were going unused.

"Repeated requests were made by this office," Ickes said yesterday, "for information as to where these cars were located and how quickly they could be made avaliable. No satisfactory information has been produced in answer to the requests."

Accordingly, the Interior Secretary and Petroleum Coordinator ordered the District No. 1 transportation committee to make a "factual survey," which covered 188 owners and operators of 147,838 tank cars.

The report, which Ickes said was submitted to him last week by W. Alton Jones, president of Cities Service Oil Co. and chairman of the transportation committee, showed there were 7744 "surplus cars" as of September 7 but 2352 were needed for immediate use.

"It had been my intention to submit this report to the special Senate committee investigating the petroleum shortage when and if I was called as a witness," said Ickes.

"Inasmuch as incomplete versions of this report have now been given public circulation, I now make it public. It speaks for itself."

2d Army Corps Rolls Across Va.

75,000 Men Move Southward Over Five Different Routes On Test Schedule

By Marshall Andrews

Post Staff Writer

Camp Lee, Va., Sept. 26.—The entire Second Army Corps was rolling southward across Virginia tonight over five routes on a time schedule designed to test its ability to move 75,000 men by road quickly, safely and efficiently.

Half of the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division arrived here early today from A. P. Hill military reservation and pitched a shelter-tent camp on this World War training ground. The other half of the division spent the night at Blackstone, Va., after both convoys gave Richmond, Va., a motion picture, with sound effects, of an army on the move. Entering the Virginia capital on two roads, the columns merged briefly, then separated again to be concentrated once more at Fort Bragg, N. C., tomorrow night.

At the same time the Forty-fourth Division started south from Fort Dix, N. J., and the Twenty-eighth from Indiantown Gap, Pa. All three divisions are accompanied by corps engineer, signal, quartermaster, medical and other troops.

Radio System Fails

An elaborate radio net, organized to control the convoys centrally from three division command posts, fell down on the job, though LaGuardia Field, N. Y., called to complain that the radio at Richmond interfered with its airplane control system. Reports from heads of convoys were telephoned to the division command post in the Mosque at Richmond and were relayed by telegraph to a corps command post at Warrenton, Va.

All convoys operated on a rigid time schedule which functioned perfectly in most cases.

The movement of the east column was made with only two accidents. Private Roy Purdue, of Salisbury, Md., Company I, 115th Infantry, suffered a fractured foot when the truck in which he was asleep sideswiped a filling station below Richmond.

Four officers and one enlisted man of the 115th Infantry, received cuts and bruises when the command car in which they were riding collided with the rear of another near Dutch Gap, Va. They were Lieuts. George B. Fowler, of Annapolis, Md.; Paul E. Bruehl, of Centreville, Md.; Moses D. Moore, of Baltimore, and William L. Spry, of Centreville, and Pvt. Thomas R. Garvey, of Pittsburgh, Pa., the driver. All were released after treatment at Camp Lee station hospital.

Two Injured in Camp

Two other men were injured in camp. They were Pvt. First Class Charles Somers, of Crisfield, Md., 110th Field Artillery, who sustained several fractured ribs when a truck under which he was asleep was moved, and Pvt. Loring Morgan, of Crisfield, who received an injured ankle by stepping into a hole in the dark.

The East column of the Twenty-Ninth will leave Camp Lee tomorrow in two convoys, the first starting at 2:30 a. m., the second at 4:41 a. m.

Division Headquarters will leave Lee at 12:01 a. m. and will be established during the southward movement at Sanford, N. C. After resting Sunday at Fort Bragg, the Division, reconcentrated, will move into its base camp near Morven, N. C., Monday.

Buckingham Apartments Ask Rent Hearing Witness to Leave

Irving Richter who told a House subcommittee that tenants protesting rent increases at Buckingham Community were subsequently asked to vacate their apartments, yesterday received a similar notice.

The management of the apartment development in Arlington County, Va., last night stated that the notice was mailed Richter before his statement was made a part of the public record of the special Defense subcommittee which concluded hearings on rent-control legislation Thursday.

An officer of the Buckingham Civic Association disclosed that Richter, an economist employed by the Wages and Hours Division of the Labor Department, was asked to vacate his apartment at 4111 North Third Street, on or before November 30, the date his lease expires.

Richter, a member of the association's executive board, said the notice was dated Tuesday and postmarked Thursday. He added that he has lived at Buckingham for two years, paid his rent promptly and received no complaints from the management.

The association announced that the incident was being called to the attention of the Office of Price Administration and the Northern Virginia Defense Council.

Coincidental, Says Management

A spokesman for the Buckingham management last night made this statement in connection with the affair:

"The fact that Mr. Irving Richter received notice that no renewal of lease would be given to him at the expiration of his present lease shortly after he appeared before the Mouse committee is purely coincidental. Office records plus United States Postoffice registered mail receipts show that this notice was filed before Mr. Richter's appearance before the House committee investigating rental increases.

"It has been necessary since the inception of Buckingham to refuse renewal of leases to some tenants. Out of 1830 families it is only natural that some few would be denied renewal of leases.

"The rent increases effective in Buckingham were officially approved by the Federal Housing Administration over a year ago. And after an investigation by the Virginia Defense council a few months ago these increases were considered not 'out of line.'"

Police Find a Riot, Can't Find Reason

A riot call at Bladensburg Road and M Street Northeast, where a policeman was reported in trouble, last night brought three scout cars, motorcycle police and police reserves from Ninth Precinct Station to break up a demonstration for which police could find no explanation.

Policemen R. T. White and H. C. Womble attempted to break up the gathering. Failing they asked a bus driver to call headquarters for help.

Gas Blasts Apartment In Suicide

Refrigerator Pilot Light Ignites Vapor As Janitor Enters, Finds Woman Dead

A 29-year-old woman's suicide by gas resulted in a shattering explosion yesterday when the fumes were ignited by a refrigerator pilot light, injuring a man who was attempting to rescue her.

The blast occurred at 711 Hamlin Street Northeast, in the apartment of a friend of the victim. The dead woman is Mrs. Ellie M. Little, of 2622 Sixth Street Northeast.

A suicide verdict was issued by the coroner's office after police reported jets in the gas stove had been turned on and a note indicating suicidal intent had been found outside of a blasted widow.

Newcomer to D. C.

Mrs. Little came to Washington from Greensboro, N. C., recently with her husband, W. A. Little, when he took a job with a Washington biscuit company.

Early yesterday she went to the apartment of Mrs. Addie Taylor, where the explosion occurred, to do some ironing while Mrs. Taylor went to work at a department store here.

Neighbors said later that they smelled gas coming from the apartment shortly before noon and noticed the kitchen shades were drawn.

Breeze Causes Blast

Circulation of air from the window caused the refrigerator pilot to ignite the gas, police reported, resulting in an explosion that blew the apartment's front and back doors from their hinges and shattered most of the window panes.

Williams, treated later at Providence Hospital for a cut over the eye and bruised nose, found Mrs. Little in the kitchen, her clothing aflame. She was pronounced dead at Casualty Hospital.

Tribby Again Offers to Do Police Duty

Lieut. Col. Joseph Clinton Tribby, Army Reserve officer, who was a captain of volunteer police during the World War, yesterday again offered to serve as an auxiliary policeman in the event of war.

COL. TRIBBY

He registered with Lieut. John J. Agnew at police headquarters "because I think we ought to have a home guard ready for any emergency."

Proprietor of a successful Georgetown jewelry firm, the 58-year-old officer, who said he also is expected to be called to active military duty, signified his readiness to take up again his duties of 20-odd years ago.

"I'm ready when they want me," he declared at his home in the Westchester Apartments last night, "but not to be a captain. There's too much writing and extra work attached to that. I want to be just a private."

Col. Tribby said he was in charge of 250 men at the Seventh Precinct during the last war. His group comprised three lieutenants and also "a corps of 50 motors."

The motor corps was composed of civilians who owned automobiles and their cars were used to transport reserves and many times served as patrol wagons, Tribby asserted.

The civilian patrolmen worked with experienced full-time policemen during the last emergency, Col. Tribby said. They were without uniforms, but were armed and their training was acquired from experience. Precinct commanders, he stated, lectured the recruits and then sent them on the street for service.

"I hope this time," Col. Tribby declared, "that they only accept reliable citizens. The last time there were many on duty who were not responsible men and they took advantage of their police authority.

"A man given a badge and the responsibility of a policeman must not overdo it," he added.

Rep. Mitchell Reports Clothing Stolen

Representative Arthur W. Mitchell (Democrat), of Chicago, reported to police yesterday that $125 worth of women's clothing was stolen from his apartment at 1320 R Street Northwest sometime between September 18 and 22.

Entrance to his home was gained, he said, by breaking a pane from a window opening on a fire escape at the rear of the building. The loot included a velvet evening wrap, a net evening dress, three dresses and two robes.

the immortal Gettysburg Address—and blurted out the admiration that most Englishmen feel for Lincoln.

The duke stopped at the Lincoln Memorial on his way back to the British Embassy after calling on Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Acting Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal.

Walking up the marble steps, he paused in front of the heroic statue of the Emancipator.

"Whose work is that?" he asked Detective Sergt. Jack Baker, one of his guards.

Baker didn't know and relayed the question to one of the memorial guards, who told the duke that the sculptor was Daniel Chester French.

A moment later the duke was reading the chiseled inscription of the Gettysburg address.

"It's marvelous," he said at the end. "I had read it before but really. . . ."

Talking to detectives a reporters, the former King Edward VIII turned to Lincoln's martyrdom.

"He was shot in a theater, wasn't he?"

"Yes," a detective said, "by a man named Booth."

"How old was he?"

Nobody present knew exactly, but several guessed that Lincoln was in his sixties. (Lincoln was only 56 when he died.)

"Did it happen in New York?" the duke then asked.

Detective Baker told him that the assassination took place in Ford's Theater here in Washington.

"He escaped on a horse?" the duke continued, talking about John Wilkes Booth. "What finally happened?"

Detective Baker said that there were several versions about the hunting down of Booth and his death.

Duke Admires Vista

On the way back to his limousine the duke paused to look at the magnificent vista formed by the reflecting pool, the Washington Monument and the Capitol.

"It's so very impressive," he said.

Incidentally, the duke was marked for assassination while he was King of England. On July 16, 1936, a man tried to shoot him while he was reviewing a Guards regiment, but was frustrated. Windsor, it was reported, didn't bat an eye, but continued his review of the troops.

Yesterday morning the duke and the duchess went into the garden of the British Embassy and posed for the newsreel men, and the duke, at their suggestion, made a little talk. J. C. Brown, veteran cameramen for M.-G.-M. News of the Day, first made some suggestions to the duke.

"Oh, that's all right," said the duke. "I'm an old hand at this. I know the ropes."

One cameramen somehow missed the picture, and asked the duke if he would go through the routine a second time. The duke laughed and said:

"We can't seem to get together on this. When you're ready I am not, and when I'm ready you are not."

Wine Served to Group

Returning to the drawing room, the duke and duchess served port and sherry to a group of friends. These included Sir Ronald Campbell, charge d'affaires of the British Embassy, Sir Anthony Rumbold, Lady Mountbatten, Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, who will be known to history as "Aunt Bessie"; Clarence Hewes, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., Brig Gen. Martin Scanlon, American air attache in London; Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, and Leander McCormick-Goodheart, counselor of the embassy.

Members of the entourage, and also the three Cairn terriers, preceded the duke and duchess to Union Station.

They themselves arrived at 1:30. Flanked by Maj. Edward J. Kelly, chief of police, and W. H. Marks, the station master, they walked past a cheering crowd in the rotunda to their special Pullman car. Police Inspectors James Beckett, Milton Smith and Richard Mansfield also hovered around them.

Before they got aboard, the duke and duchess thanked Station Master Marks and Maj. Kelly.

"Good-by, Mr. Kelly," said the duke. "I'm glad to have seen you again."

Kelly, when a young detective sergeant, went to the Canadian border in 1919 and escorted the duke, then the Prince of Wales, to Washington. About six weeks ago, shortly after Kelly was promoted to police chief, The Washington Post published a Sunday feature story about him and the duke, recalling that the duke, durnig the trip from Canada, had urged Kelly to take a nap in his bed.

Read Story in Nassau

It turns out that the duke and duchess read the story in Nassau, where the duke is stationed as Governor of the Bahamas.

The duchess revealed as much to Maj. Kelly when he was presented to her at the party given in the Willard by the Women's National Press Club. She said she recognized Kelly by the picture of him which had been published in The Post.

"My husband and I read what you had to say about him in the paper," she said. "He liked it."

The duke and duchess got into their car—which had four rooms, a dining room and a lounge—about five minutes before the train was to leave. "Aunt Bessie" went in for a last farewell, and so did Gen. Scanlon, Col. Rex Benson, of the embassy staff, and a few others.

As the train was pulling out, the duke and duchess appeared on the platform and waved. Crowds outside the fence and those inside—grimy railroad men, policemen and officials—waved back, crying, "Good-by."

The Windsors, it was clear, had impressed Washington as a happily married couple who wanted people to like them, who worked hard toward that end, and who looked forward to coming back again many times in the future.

The only thing on the program of their whirlwind 40-hour visit that remained unpublicized was the "private dinner" at the British Embassy on Thursday night.

This much is known about it. The Vice President and Mrs. Wallace were there, and so were Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau. Others included Sir Ronald Campbell, Rear Admiral H. Pott and Mrs. Pott, Melbourne Christerson, of the Associated Press, president of the National Press Club, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tufty, the latter president of the Women's National Press Club.

The duchess wore white with a huge ruby and diamond headdress and a ruby and diamond bracelet.

SEPTEMBER 27, 1941

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, climaxes an eventful week in American naval and marine history. The first of the Liberty Fleet ships is to be launched at Fairfield, Baltimore, at 12:30 P.M. (E.S.T.). Before the day is over 14 vessels, under the auspices of the U. S. Maritime Commission, will have slid down the ways.

The launchings will take place at eleven ports on two oceans and the Gulf of Mexico, from Quincy, Massachusetts, to Seattle, Washington.

MORE THAN 50,000 TONS IN FOUR DAYS

The week is a particularly eventful one for Bethlehem. Within four days its shipbuilding operations will have launched more than 50,000 tons of vessels: The battleship Massachusetts slid into the water on September 23, and on Liberty Fleet Day Bethlehem yards see the launching of the first Liberty Fleet vessel, S.S. Patrick Henry; the tanker, Sinclair Superflame, built for Sinclair Refining Company; and the cargo ship, James McKay, built for Lykes Brothers Steamship Company. Bethlehem has 76 vessels now building for the U. S. Navy. In addition, 93 merchant ships are scheduled for the Maritime Commission and other owners.

Bethlehem will have launched 41 vessels during the current calendar year. This is but the beginning of the "bridge of ships." The schedule for the Bethlehem-Fairfield Yard alone calls for the launching of one ship a week during 1942, and the combined yards will complete a ship on the average of every 3½ working days, including heavy naval vessels.

Old Glory Takes Night Off

Old Glory that flies atop the Capitol rotunda caused a mild ripple of excitement last night as she took her annual rest. The flag, which is never officially lowered, was not flying last night. Scores of persons called The Post, asking: "Do you know the flag on top of the Capitol is down?" Capitol guards explained: "The flag is not flying because the flagpole is being painted.

Builders Protest Ceiling on Prices

A meeting of almost a thousand representatives of the Washington construction industry and affiliated trades authorized a seven man committee to seek the elimination of the $6000 sale price ceiling placed on housing construction by the OPM last Monday.

The new regulation, which would deny priorities on building materials for houses costing more than $6000 or renting for more than $50 a month, was described by the builders as not taking into account conditions existing in Washington.

Speakers from the floor, during an hour and a half of discussion, declared that much of the demand in this city was for houses costing more than the amount specified. The demand for defense housing in many cities, they said, was made by an influx of factory workers and skilled tradesmen. In Washington, however, the term "defense worker" includes many high-ranking executives, Army and Navy officers and professional experts who refuse to take accommodations in the $50 a month class, they said.

Furthermore, one contractor declared, there are many small builders who construct only five or six houses a year and those in the higher priced brackets. The new regulation would force these men out of business, it was asserted.

A letter read at the session from Rufus S. Lusk, local real estate statistician and editor of the Washington Business Review, stated that the ruling "will cripple the lumber, cement, brick, glass, insulation, roofing and stone business," which are not affected by priorities.

Several speakers, including Lawrence Williams, chairman of the District Defense Housing Committee, urged that the builders recommend to OPM that a maximum amount of critical materials permissible for any one dwelling unit be set rather than the price ceiling.

Williams said that by this method, substitute materials could be used, and higher priced dwelling units constructed to meet the demand of higher-salaried Government and service employes without using any more critical materials than would ordinarily go into a $6000 house.

The committee set up last night is made up of Fred A. Smith, of the Washington Board of Trade, Arthur B. Heaton, of the Washington Builders Congress, Charles C. Koones, of the Washington Real Estate Board, Leon Chatelain, jr., of the Washington chapter of the American Institute of Architects, Francis G. Addison, jr., of the District Bankers' Association, William N. Payne, of the District Building and Loan League, and Waverly Taylor, of the Operative Builders Association.

Taylor, who presided at the meeting in the United States Chamber of Commerce auditorium, said that each of the represented organizations would be asked to elect two men to serve on a permanent committee to study ways of cooperating with priority demands without necessitating the price ceiling.

A Step Forward

1-Cent Milk Yardstick Is Agreed On

Another step toward qualifying Washington's needy, undernourished children for a Federal one-cent milk program was taken yesterday.

A special subcommittee of the D. C. Nutrition Committee approved an eligibility yardstick for recommendation next Tuesday to the city-wide group charged with the responsibility of arranging the milk project.

Headed by Mrs. Lucian Jordan, health chairman of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, the subcommittee did not make public its report. Its job was principally to determine what is the Capital's lowest third income group.

To be eligible for penny half-pint bottles, children must be dependent upon public or private relief or members of "lowest third" families. The requirement is laid down by the Department of Agriculture, sponsor of relief milk programs throughout the country.

Robert L. Haycock, acting superintendent of schools and chairman of the general committee named last week by the Board of Education to prepare plans for the milk project, announced the appointment of Ross Haworth to the group. Haworth was named District WPA administrator this week.

Sleuths Cork Soldiers Home Bootleg Source

They had to disguise themselves as disabled service men, enter the institution as patients and get thrown into the guard house to do it, but two Washington detectives succeeded in tracing to its source the bootleg whisky which had been finding its way into the Soldiers' Home.

The detectives—George Cooper and Joseph F. Landman, both of the Twelfth Precinct—finally wormed their way into the confidence of some inmates of the guard house and one day escaped with them.

The trail led to two houses near the home. They were raided Thursday after the detectives bought whisky with marked money, and yesterday six Negroes were haled into Police Court on charges of illegal possession and sale of whisky and maintaining a disorderly house. They demanded a jury trial and were released under $000 bond.

Cooper and Landman carried out their assignment in collusion with officials of the home. Both masqueraded as soldiers from Fort Benning, Ga. Cooper feigned a dislocated hip and walked with a cane. Landman, admitted to the home for treatment of an injured back and a "distorted mind," likewise played his role convincingly.

Funeral Rites Set Monday for Dr. Taliaferro

Funeral services for Dr. Thomas Hardy Taliaferro, 76, dean emeritus of the faculty of the University of Maryland, will be held Monday morning at 11 in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Washington. Interment will be at Old Ware Church in Gloucester County, Va.

Dr. Taliaferro

Dr. Taliaferro died Thursday night at his home in the Concord Apartments, 1816 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, following an illness of several weeks.

He was born at Jacksonville, Fla., March 22, 1871, and was educated at Virginia Military Institute and at Johns Hopkins University, from which he received his degree of doctor of philosophy.

From 1904 to 1907 he was assistant statisical editor of the Census Bureau and then joined the University of Maryland as professor of civil engineering. He served as professor of mathematics, dean of the college of engineering from 1916 to 1920 and dean of the college of arts and sciences from 1927 to 1937. The post of dean of the faculty was created for him.

Upon his automatic retirement last April the position of dean emeritus was established for Dr. Taliaferro.

Idle Tank Cars Total but 5192, Ickes Declares

Latest figures show 5192 railway tank cars—and not 20,000—idle and available to haul gasoline and oil to the East, Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes announced yesterday.

The findings of an inventory which he made public conflicted with the statement made recently to a Senate investigating committee by J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads. Pelley testified 20,000 tank cars were going unused.

"Repeated requests were made by this office," Ickes said yesterday, "for information as to where these cars were located and how quickly they could be made available. No satisfactory information has been produced in answer to the requests."

Accordingly, the Interior Secretary and Petroleum Coordinator ordered the District No. 1 transportation committee to make a "factual survey," which covered 188 owners and operators of 147,838 tank cars.

The report, which Ickes said was submitted to him last week by W. Alton Jones, president of Cities Service Oil Co. and chairman of the transportation committee, showed there were 7744 "surplus cars" as of September 7 but 2552 were needed for immediate use.

"It had been my intention to submit this report to the special Senate committee investigating the petroleum shortage when and if I was called as a witness," said Ickes.

"Inasmuch as incomplete versions of this report have now been given public circulation, I now make it public. It speaks for itself."

75,000 Men Move Southward Over Five Different Routes On Test Schedule

By Marshall Andrews

Post Staff Writer

Camp Lee, Va., Sept. 26.—The entire Second Army Corps was rolling southward across Virginia tonight over five routes on a time schedule designed to test its ability to move 75,000 men by road quickly, safely and efficiently.

Half of the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division arrived here early today from A. P. Hill military reservation and pitched a shelter-tent camp on this World War training ground. The other half of the division spent the night at Blackstone, Va., after both convoys gave Richmond, Va., a motion picture, with sound effects, of an army on the move. Entering the Virginia capital on two roads, the columns merged briefly, then separated again to be concentrated once more at Fort Bragg, N. C., tomorrow night.

At the same time the Forty-fourth Division started south from Fort Dix, N. J., and the Twenty-eighth from Indiantown Gap, Pa. All three divisions are accompanied by corps engineer, signal, quartermaster, medical and other troops.

Radio System Fails

An elaborate radio net, organized to control the convoys centrally from three division command posts, fell down on the job, though LaGuardia Field, N. Y., called to complain that the radio at Richmond interfered with its airplane control system. Reports from heads of convoys were telephoned to the division command post in the Mosque at Richmond and were relayed by telegraph to a corps command post at Warrenton, Va.

All convoys operated on a rigid time schedule which functioned perfectly in most cases.

The movement of the east column was made with only two accidents. Private Roy Purdue, of Salisbury, Md., Company I, 115th Infantry, suffered a fractured foot when the truck in which he was asleep sideswiped a filling station below Richmond.

Four officers and one enlisted man of the 115th Infantry, received cuts and bruises when the command car in which they were riding collided with the rear of another near Dutch Gap, Va. They were Lieuts. George B. Fowler, of Annapolis, Md.; Paul E. Bruehl, of Centreville, Md.; Moses D. Moore, of Baltimore, and William L. Spry, of Centreville, and Pvt. Thomas R. Garvey, of Pittsburgh, Pa., the driver. All were released after treatment at Camp Lee station hospital.

Two Injured in Camp

Two other men were injured in camp. They were Pvt. First Class Charles Somers, of Crisfield, Md., 110th Field Artillery, who sustained several fractured ribs when a truck under which he was asleep was moved, and Pvt. Loring Morgan, of Crisfield, who received an injured ankle by stepping into a hole in the dark.

The East column of the Twenty-Ninth will leave Camp Lee tomorrow in two convoys, the first starting at 2:30 a. m., the second at 4:41 a. m.

Division Headquarters will leave Lee at 12:01 a. m. and will be established during the southward movement at Sanford, N. C. After resting Sunday at Fort Bragg, the Division, reconcentrated, will move into its base camp near Morven, N. C., Monday.

Buckingham Apartments Ask Rent Hearing Witness to Leave

Irving Richter who told a House subcommittee that tenants protesting rent increases at Buckingham Community were subsequently asked to vacate their apartments, yesterday received a similar notice.

The management of the apartment development in Arlington County, Va., last night stated that the notice was mailed Richter before his statement was made a part of the public record of the special Defense subcommittee which concluded hearings on rent-control legislation Thursday.

An officer of the Buckingham Civic Association disclosed that Richter, an economist employed by the Wages and Hours Division of the Labor Department, was asked to vacate his apartment at 4111 North Third Street, on or before November 30, the date his lease expires.

Richter, a member of the association's executive board, said the notice was dated Tuesday and postmarked Thursday. He added that he has lived at Buckingham for two years, paid his rent promptly and received no complaints from the management.

The association announced that the incident was being called to the attention of the Office of Price Administration and the Northern Virginia Defense Council.

Coincidental, Says Management

A spokesman for the Buckingham management last night made this statement in connection with the affair:

"The fact that Mr. Irving Richter received notice that no renewal of lease would be given to him at the expiration of his present lease shortly after he appeared before the Mouse committee is purely coincidental. Office records plus United States Postoffice registered mail receipts show that this notice was filed before Mr. Richter's appearance before the House committee investigating rental increases.

"It has been necessary since the inception of Buckingham to refuse renewal of leases to some tenants. Out of 1830 families it is only natural that some few would be denied renewal of leases.

"The rent increases effective in Buckingham were officially approved by the Federal Housing Administration over a year ago. And after an investigation by the Virginia Defense council a few months ago these increases were considered not 'out of line.'"

Police Find a Riot, Can't Find Reason

A riot call at Bladensburg Road and M Street Northeast, where a policeman was reported in trouble, last night brought three scout cars, motorcycle police and police reserves from Ninth Precinct Station to break up a demonstration for which police could find no explanation.

Policemen R. T. White and H. C. Womble attempted to break up the gathering. Failing they asked a bus driver to call headquarters for help.

Gas Blasts Apartment In Suicide

Refrigerator Pilot Light Ignites Vapor As Janitor Enters, Finds Woman Dead

A 29-year-old woman's suicide by gas resulted in a shattering explosion yesterday when the fumes were ignited by a refrigerator pilot light, injuring a man who was attempting to rescue her.

The blast occurred at 711 Hamlin Street Northeast, in the apartment of a friend of the victim. The dead woman is Mrs. Ellie M. Little, of 2622 Sixth Street Northeast.

A suicide verdict was issued by the coroner's office after police reported jets in the gas stove had been turned on and a note indicating suicidal intent had been found outside of a blasted widow.

Newcomer to D. C.

Mrs. Little came to Washington from Greensboro, N. C., recently with her husband, W. A. Little, when he took a job with a Washington biscuit company.

Early yesterday she went to the apartment of Mrs. Addie Taylor, where the explosion occurred, to do some ironing while Mrs. Taylor went to work at a department store here.

Neighbors said later that they smelled gas coming from the apartment shortly before noon and noticed the kitchen shades were drawn.

Breeze Causes Blast

Circulation of air from the window caused the refrigerator pilot to ignite the gas, police reported, resulting in an explosion that blew the apartment's front and back doors from their hinges and shattered most of the window panes.

Williams, treated later at Providence Hospital for a cut over the eye and bruised nose, found Mrs. Little in the kitchen, her clothing aflame. She was pronounced dead at Casualty Hospital.

Tribby Again Offers to Do Police Duty

Lieut. Col. Joseph Clinton Tribby, Army Reserve officer, who was a captain of volunteer police during the World War, yesterday again offered to serve as an auxiliary policeman in the event of war.

COL. TRIBBY

He registered with Lieut. John J. Agnew at police headquarters "because I think we ought to have a home guard ready for any emergency."

Proprietor of a successful Georgetown jewelry firm, the 58-year-old officer, who said he also is expected to be called to active military duty, signified his readiness to take up again his duties of 20-odd years ago.

"I'm ready when they want me," he declared at his home in the Westchester Apartments last night, "but not to be a captain. There's too much writing and extra work attached to that. I want to be just a private."

Col. Tribby said he was in charge of 250 men at the Seventh Precinct during the last war. His group comprised three lieutenants and also "a corps of 50 motors."

The motor corps was composed of civilians who owned automobiles and their cars were used to transport reserves and many times served as patrol wagons, Tribby asserted.

The civilian patroimen worked with experienced full-time policemen during the last emergency, Col. Tribby said. They were without uniforms, but were armed and their training was acquired from experience. Precinct commanders, he stated, lectured the recruits and then sent them on the street for service.

"I hope this time," Col. Tribby declared, "that they only accept reliable citizens. The last time there were many on duty who were not responsible men and they took advantage of their police authority.

"A man given a badge and the responsibility of a policeman must not overdo it," he added.

Rep. Mitchell Reports Clothing Stolen

Representative Arthur W. Mitchell (Democrat), of Chicago, reported to police yesterday that $125 worth of women's clothing was stolen from his apartment at 1320 R Street Northwest sometime between September 18 and 22.

Entrance to his home was gained, he said, by breaking a pane from a window opening on a fire escape at the rear of the building. The loot included a velvet evening wrap, a net evening dress, three dresses and two robes.

the immortal Gettysburg Address—and blurted out the admiration that most Englishmen feel for Lincoln.

The duke stopped at the Lincoln Memorial on his way back to the British Embassy after calling on Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Acting Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal.

Walking up the marble steps, he paused in front of the heroic statue of the Emancipator.

"Whose work is that?" he asked Detective Sergt. Jack Baker, one of his guards.

Baker didn't know and relayed the question to one of the memorial guards, who told the duke that the sculptor was Daniel Chester French.

A moment later the duke was reading the chiseled inscription of the Gettysburg address.

"It's marvelous," he said at the end. "I had read it before but really. . . ."

Talking to detectives a reporters, the former King Edward VIII turned to Lincoln's martyrdom.

"He was shot in a theater, wasn't he?"

"Yes," a detective said, "by a man named Booth."

"How old was he?"

Nobody present knew exactly, but several guessed that Lincoln was in his sixties. (Lincoln was only 56 when he died.)

"Did it happen in New York?" the duke then asked.

Detective Baker told him that the assassination took place in Ford's Theater here in Washington.

"He escaped on a horse?" the duke continued, talking about John Wilkes Booth. "What finally happened?"

Detective Baker said that there were several versions about the hunting down of Booth and his death.

Duke Admires Vista

On the way back to his limousine the duke paused to look at the magnificent vista formed by the reflecting pool, the Washington Monument and the Capitol.

"It's so very impressive," he said.

Incidentally, the duke was marked for assassination while he was King of England. On July 16, 1936, a man tried to shoot him while he was reviewing a Guards regiment, but was frustrated. Windsor, it was reported, didn't bat an eye, but continued his review of the troops.

Yesterday morning the duke and the duchess went into the garden of the British Embassy and posed for the newsreel men, and the duke, at their suggestion, made a little talk. J. C. Brown, veteran cameramen for M.-G.-M. News of the Day, first made some suggestions to the duke.

"Oh, that's all right," said the duke. "I'm an old hand at this. I know the ropes."

One cameramen somehow missed the picture, and asked the duke if he would go through the routine a second time. The duke laughed and said:

"We can't seem to get together on this. When you're ready I am not, and when I'm ready you are not."

Wine Served to Group

Returning to the drawing room, the duke and duchess served port and sherry to a group of friends. These included Sir Ronald Campbell, charge d'affaires of the British Embassy, Sir Anthony Rumbold, Lady Mountbatten, Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, who will be known to history as "Aunt Bessie"; Clarence Hewes, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., Brig Gen. Martin Scanlon, American air attache in London; Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, and Leander McCormick-Goodheart, counselor of the embassy.

Members of the entourage, and also the three Cairn terriers, preceded the duke and duchess to Union Station.

They themselves arrived at 1:30. Flanked by Maj. Edward J. Kelly, chief of police, and W. H. Marks, the station master, they walked past a cheering crowd in the rotunda to their special Pullman car. Police Inspectors James Beckett, Milton Smith and Richard Mansfield also hovered around them.

Before they got aboard, the duke and duchess thanked Station Master Marks and Maj. Kelly.

"Good-by, Mr. Kelly," said the duke. "I'm glad to have seen you again."

Kelly, when a young detective sergeant, went to the Canadian border in 1919 and escorted the duke, then the Prince of Wales, to Washington. About six weeks ago, shortly after Kelly was promoted to police chief, The Washington Post published a Sunday feature story about him and the duke, recalling that the duke, durnig the trip from Canada, had urged Kelly to take a nap in his bed.

Read Story in Nassau

It turns out that the duke and duchess read the story in Nassau, where the duke is stationed as Governor of the Bahamas.

The duchess revealed as much to Maj. Kelly when he was presented to her at the party given in the Willard by the Women's National Press Club. She said she recognized Kelly by the picture of him which had been published in The Post.

"My husband and I read what you had to say about him in the paper," she said. "He liked it."

The duke and duchess got into their car—which had four rooms, a dining room and a lounge—about five minutes before the train was to leave. "Aunt Bessie" went in for a last farewell, and so did Gen. Scanlon, Col. Rex Benson, of the embassy staff, and a few others.

As the train was pulling out, the duke and duchess appeared on the platform and waved. Crowds outside the fence and those inside—grimy railroad men, policemen and officials—waved back, crying, "Good-by."

The Windsors, it was clear, had impressed Washington as a happily married couple who wanted people to like them, who worked hard toward that end, and who looked forward to coming back again many times in the future.

The only thing on the program of their whirlwind 40-hour visit that remained unpublicized was the "private dinner" at the British Embassy on Thursday night.

This much is known about it. The Vice President and Mrs. Wallace were there, and so were Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau. Others included Sir Ronald Campbell, Rear Admiral H. Pott and Mrs. Pott, Melbourne Christerson, of the Associated Press, president of the National Press Club, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tufty, the latter president of the Women's National Press Club.

The duchess wore white with a huge ruby and diamond headdress and a ruby and diamond bracelet.

Georgetown University's alert eleven seized upon three breaks last night to surprise Ole Miss' favored Rebels, 16-6, before an all-time local college record attendance of 25,000 fans at Griffith Stadium.

The Hoyas, entering the game a 5-8 underdog, turned a first period fumble into a 24-yard field goal by Quarterback John Barrett, and picked up two loose balls for a pair of touchdowns in the third period. Ends Chris Pavich and Art Lemke tallied, the first on a "steal" of the ball and a 44-yard run, and the latter on a 43-yard dash after plucking a fumble in midair.

Ole Miss, throttled most of the game by another of the great lines for which Georgetown is noted, struck for its only touchdown midway the final period. Penalties played a big part as the Rebels drove from the Hoya 34 to pay dirt, with Fullback Lee Castle plunging the last yard.

Aerial Game Stopped

Against a powerful Georgetown line, led by Tackles Al Blozis and George Perpich and Pavich and Lemke, the famed Rebel passing attack of Junie Hovious-to-Merle Hapes never was really able to get going. At that, though, Messrs Hovious and Hapes gave the Hoyas many an anxious moment throughout the bitterly fought game in which penalties and roughness were frequent.

The touchdowns by Pavich and Lemke were twin streaks from the Blue. Pavich, a blonde, 170-pound junior, "stole" the ball from an ill-fated Hapes, who was the goat of the game, as the Rebel back hit into the line.

Picking up an unneeded blocker, Pavich dashed across the goal line. Barrett's placement for conversion missed.

Scarcely two minutes later Lamke all but duplicated Pavich's scoring play as he plucked a Hapes fumble from the air and raced 43 yards, without a hand placed on him. Benny Bulvin, stocky Georgetown halfback, converted from placement.

Ole Miss Goes Over

Ole Miss marched to its tally with eight minutes to play. After an exchange of kicks, the Rebels took possession of the ball. A pair of line cracks by Castle and a pass, Jackie Flack to End J. Davidson, carried to the 10. There Georgetown sustained a slugging penalty which moved the ball to the one-yard line. In two tries, Castle went over. Flack's placement was wide.

This score marked the second time the Rebel had crossed the Georgetown goal line. But the first one didn't count. Offsides by what appeared to be the whole right side of the Rebel line nullified a pass, Hovious to Bill Eubanks, which carried into pay dirt. For the Rebels in general and Hovious, Eubanks in particular, this was a bitter blow, for Eubanks made a gorgeous broken-field dash to the goal line.

Aside from its scoring plays, Georgetown was well bottled by the fast charging Ole Miss line. And only twice were the Hoyas able themselves to get into enemy territory. Once in the first quarter Georgetown reached the Rebel 23, but Ole Miss rushed in re-

Hoyas' Bulvin Appears Loose at End, But He Doesn't Go Far

From spread formation, Halfback Benny Bulvin swings out on a left-end run against Mississippi's Rebels at Griffith Stadium last night. But the stocky Hoya was pulled on the G. U. 45 after a 2-yard gain. Lou Falcone (No. 2, nearest to Bulvin) and Angelo Paternoster (behind Falcone) cut in ahead of Bulvin to lead interference. Ole Miss safetyman is Merle Hapes, highly publicized Rebel fullback whose two fumbles leading to G. U. scores, made him the goat of the game.

23,000 Fans See Philadelphians Get 3 Touchdowns in Initial Quarter

Philadelphia, Sept. 26.—Temple inaugurated its 1941 football season tonight with a 31 to 9 victory over the University of Kansas in an intersectional game witnessed by 23,000 persons.

Three Kansas fumbles set up as many Temple touchdowns in the first quarter and although Kansas came back strong in the second and third periods, the home team added 13 points in the final quarter to win going away.

With halfback Andy Tomasic leading the way, Temple displayed a fast, tricky offensive but proved easy prey to Kansas' passing game featuring Ralph Miller. In the first half Miller completed 10 out of 12 pass attempts and throughout the second and third quarter kept Kansas knocking at the door.

Temple scored two minutes after the kickoff when Kansas fumbled again and Temple scored its second touchdown for enough points to win.

In first downs Kansas led 16 to 13. The visitors tried a total of 28 passes and completed 13 for a net gain of 199 yards.

Sewanee Wins In Upset Over W. & L., 20-19

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Sept. 26.—Capt. Earl Bearden personally conducted Sewanee to a stunning, uphill victory over Washington and Lee today in the season's opener here by passing to End Frank Walker for the touchdown that tied the score with a minute to play, then calmly place-kicking the winning point in a thrilling climax to a 20-19 triumph before 3000 fans.

Washington and Lee scored in the first Right Halfback McKenna's line plunge, Paul Cavaliere counted in the second on Pinck's 8-yard pass and Teddy Ciesla ran 31 yards in the third. Frank Socha made good only one of three placement tries for extra point, and these meant the difference between victory and defeat.

Sewanee scored in the second on Jimmy Lyle's short line plunge after Bearden's ramming and passing put the Tigers in scoring position. Bearden's passes also accounted for the second score, Pank Owen getting a touchdown on a 22-yard aerial.

Duquesne's Eleven Routs Niagara, 33-0

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 26.—Duquesne University's Dukes gave their departing coach, Waldo (Buff) Donelli, a fitting farewell party tonight, romping to a 33 to 0, triumph over Niagara University for the largest score they have amassed in any game since he became boss back in 1939.

Donelli resigned a few hours before the game after Elmer Layden, high commissioner of pro football, ruled he couldn't become coach of the Pittsburgh Steelers if he also held the college job.

A crowd of 11,000, including the entire Pittsburgh Steeler squad, who came down from Greensburg to pick pointers on their new style of play, watched the Bluffites pass for their first score, then run through the invaders for the other four.

As a result, Donelli leaves with a brilliant record of 17 victories, 1 tie and only 1 loss during his brief regime at the university.

Duquesne notched 11 first downs to 6, netting 230 yards rushing to minus 13 and 420 from all sources to 144. Two Donellis played a big part in the triumph. Mayo, youngest brother of the Buffer, sparkled in his debut as a sub halfback, and Ray Donelli, a cousin of the coach, made his bow as a signal caller.

A pass good for 37 yards, Chadonic to Maliszewski, scored the first touchdown in the first quarter. Ahwesh circled his right end for 10 yards and the second touchdown Gonda busted 5 yards through tackle for the third one. Harkins knifed 14 yards through right tackle on a fake reverse for the fourth and Platukis galloped 50 yards around his right end for the final one near the end of the game.

Judge Black Opens Methodist League Duckpin Season

Judge Eugene Black, member of the United States Board of Tax Appeals, tonight at 7:45 will roll out the first ball to open the 1941-42 season of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church Bowling League. The Lucky Strike alleys at Fourteenth and Riggs Place Northwest will be used.

The league is composed of 28 teams of men and women from every organization of the church.

Donelli Is Forced To Quit Duquesne Post for Steelers

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 26.—Aldo (Buff) Donelli resigned today as head coach and athletic director of Duquesne University, after Elmer Layden, high commissioner of professional football, ruled he could not accept the job of coaching the Pittsburgh Steelers and the college post, too.

Steve Sinko, a native of Minnesota and assistant under Donelli, was made head coach. Donelli, however, directed his team tonight as it rolled up a big score against Niagara University.

Jack Davis, publicity director of the university, said the institution had released Donelli, whose contract ran through 1942.

Syracuse Scores; Kicker Cheered

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 26 (AP).—Syracuse's speedy backs charged to a 39-to-0 victory over doughty Clarkson in Archbold Stadium tonight, but the cheers of the estimated 16,000 fans went to little Leland (Bunky) Morris, the Orange toe expert, for his drop kicking exhibition.

Morris, 147-pound junior from nearby Norwick, tallied two field goals by the almost nonexistent drop-kick. His first came in the second period, kicked from the 15. The second was booted from the visitors' 38 in the final period.

Clarkson's usual stubborn resistance was unavailing in tonight's opener. The Orangemen rolled up 20 first downs and 499 yards by rushing but managed to lose the ball four times on fumbles.

Durocher Promises Yanks 'Heluva Battle'

No Decision Made on Starting Pitcher Yet; Manager Talks About Team's Power

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 26.—A song of defiance came from the Brooklyn Dodgers today as Manager Leo (Lippy) Durocher gave the public a peek at his strategy for the World Series with the New York Yankees.

His four starting pitchers will be Whitlow Wyatt, Kirby Higbe, Curt Davis and Fred Fitzsimmons, although not necessarily in that order, he disclosed, and the first fireman called for relief every day will be good-natured, chubby Hugh Casey.

This was hardly starting information for the roomful of reporters who gathered at Durocher's lavish suite in a midtown hotel, but the dapper, talkative skipper of the new National League champions, went on from there.

"My gang is confident," he said, and "I know they're not afraid of 'em. I won't make a prediction who will win. The only thing I know for sure is that the first game will start at 1:30 Wednesday in Yankee Stadium and we'll be there. But you can bet your life it will be a hell of a battle.

"They talk about 'you can't make a mistake against the Yanks or they'll blow your brains out.' Well, I'll say this. They better not make a mistake against us, either. We've got power, too. They better not groove one for Lavagetto, or Camilli, or Medwick, or Reiser."

No First Choice

Durocher refused to be drawn into an outright statement that Wyatt, his benign, baldish pitching ace, would be his first choice, but reported with obvious intent:

"Who would you pick?"

Then in a discussion of his pitchers' chances, he added:

"I'm not worried about Wyatt. He'll take care of himself.

"Higbe? Well, that's hard to say. Higbe just don't know from nuthin'. He doesn't pick any spots. When he's got that ball in his hand he doesn't even look to see if it's a Spalding. He just grabs it in his fist and lets go.

"Davis pitched a shutout against the Yanks in Carolina last spring. He's got a ball that breaks—the kind of a pitch that the Yanks aren't used to seeing.

"Anyway these guys are my pitch-

Weak-Hitting Nats Lose Two To Yankees

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Sept. 26.—The Nats were a three-hit ball team in Yankee Stadium today, with disastrous results. They made three hits in the first game of a double-header and repeated themselves in the second game. They collected a pair of defeats, 3 to 1 and 1 to 0.

The fellow who got licked, 1 to 0, was Rookie Early Wynn who had the misfortune to meet up with Marius Russo in that second game on an occasion when Russo was pitching shut-out ball. Ken Chase was the victim of the Yankees in the first game wherein Spurgeon Chandler was the winning pitcher.

Wynn and Chase did not exactly disgrace themselves. Each of them held the Yankees to six hits, but Wynn's defeat was a bitter affair for the young right-hander. Phil Rizzuto dumped a lazy fly ball into the leftfield seats where they meet up with the foul line only 310 feet distant, and it was the only run of the ball game. It happened in the first inning.

Wynn Pitches Well

Otherwise Wynn was magnificent in shutting out the Yanks for the remainder of the proceedings, but Russo was pretty good himself in holding the Nats to three hits. In fact, not a Washington athlete reached second base against Russo in that second game and one of their three hits was a freak-hopping ground ball off Ortiz' bat.

The Nats, incidentally, were a

Louis and Nova Will Weigh In At the Garden

By the United Press

New York, Sept. 26.—The Louis-Nova fight attained "supercolossal" status today when the New York boxing commission reluctantly shifted Monday's weigh-in from the usual "Black Hole of Calcutta" in the State Building to Madison Square Garden.

The change in sites was made to accommodate the largest army of newspapermen ever assembled to cover any sports event—more than 500. Most of the out-of-town writers will remain for the World Series.

This is the first time the Garden has been used for a weigh-in since the second Louis-Schmeling fight in 1938—a bout that drew more than a million dollars. There was such confusion at the '38 Garden weigh-in that Chairman John J. Phelan of the commission vowed no scaling ceremony ever would be held again in the house that Rickard built. In the hurly-burly, photographers got rattled and started taking pictures of Messrs. Schmeling and Louis—without their trunks.

However, Chairman Phelan relented today, when confronted with prospects of the thundering newspaper horde descending upon the diminutive weigh-in suite in the State building—a hot box that usually is jammed with sweltering humanity even for run-of-the-mine Garden scraps. Phelan said, "I will take this last chance on a Garden weigh-in. If it develops into a circus as in 1938, there'll never be another in the Garden."

Most of these seats are in the east field stands, temporary seats erected below the bleachers; some in the right field stands, and a number of lower stand boxes.

Whirlaway Goes Today In Handicap

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 26.—Whirlaway, who's a grown up leading man now, has to turn some of the spotlight over to the juvenile actors at Belmont Park's racing show tomorrow.

Whirly will go out to pick up some $7500 in the long Jockey Club Gold Cup grind, thus boosting his earnings over the $350,000 mark (if he wins). But taking the play away from the prima donna's role is the fifty-second running of the Futurity, which drew the names of 14 2-year-olds through the entry box today and which will be worth in the neighborhood of $85,000 to the winner.

Whirlaway is no dead-eyed cinch this time, despite the romp he had in the Lawrence Realization a week ago. He's up against some pretty fair handicappers in the Gold Cup—and you probably remember that the last time the 3-year-old boss ran in a handicap field he was given a considerable going over by War Relic two Saturdays back.

Fenelon Chief Threat

His chief opposition this time figures to come from William Woodward's Fenelon, who won the Manhattan Handicap early this week after three disappointing outings, and Lou Tufano's Market Wise, a 3-year-old who came bouncing home in a couple of important stakes despite an ailing heel. Whirly will carry only 114 pounds to Fenelon's 125, but the 2-mile distance of the Gold Cup is the longest he's ever been asked to go. Market Wise also picks up 114.

Best-liked in the Futurity field is Mrs. Payne Whitney's entry of Devil Diver and Shut Out, who ran just that way in the rich Hopeful Stakes at Saratoga in August. However, Devil Diver wound up second and Shut Out was a well-whipped sixth behind Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Dogpatch in one section of the six-furlong Futurity trial last Tuesday, and Dogpatch, who'll be on hand tomorrow, was flying that time to finish in 1:10.

Gaithersburg Nine Plays Benefit For Rod Costello

For the benefit of a fund for a monument at the grave of Rodney H. Costello jr., who was drowned in the Potomac River at Seneca several weeks ago, the Gaithersburg baseball team, champions of the Upper Montgomery County League, and a nine of all-stars, composed of the pick of the other five clubs of the league, will play at Poolesville tomorrow afternoon. The two teams played at Gaithersburg last Sunday and Gaithersburg won, 3 to 1. Joseph Hutchinson, of Rockville, will manage the all-stars.

Young Costello, member of the Rockville team, was a student at the Gaithersburg High School and an outstanding athlete.

Gamecocks Hope Substitution Rule Will Save Uniforms

By the Associated Press

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 26.—The new free substitution rule should help the South Carolina football squad.

W. A. Duncan, the equipment manager, says players who sat on the bench last year wore out their uniforms twice as fast as those on the field because the fellows on the bench did a lot of squirming when excited. There is a concrete wall behind the bench in the Carolina Stadium.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Brooklyn, Sept. 26.—Outfielder Ducky Medwick, one of the more refined of the Brooklyn Bums, was saying today that the Bums don't mind being called bums; in fact, the Bums even call each other bums now without the trace of a smile and in perfect security.

POVICH

"Funny thing," said Bum Medwick, "we used to get mad about it. Nobody likes to be called a bum. It didn't sound right, specially when we were up there leading the league in the middle of the season. But Brooklyn is the only place in the world where they don't mean strictly that a bum is a bum. Those Brooklyn fans can call you a bum and somehow make it sound like a compliment.

"We used to have a kid in our gang named Stinky. Nobody ever called him anything but that, and the word lost its meaning for us, just like this bum business. Stinky was the nicest kid in our crowd. What the heck, it was just a name. Brooklyn is a funny town. These Brooklyn fans have gotten us ball players to thinking like Brooklyn fans. They were right. We're bums. That's okay. We got the Brooklyn viewpoint, or maybe I should say viewpernt."

It isn't one-sided admiration, though, Medwick was saying. The Dodgers love those Brooklyn fans. "You've got to," said Medwick. "I look around out there when I'm in left field and I see the kind of people they are, mostly men and kids who have had a tough time scraping up that 55 cents to get into those bleachers. They're in that ball game as much as we are. They fight for us. Their souls are in our ball games and when we blow one, we've let 'em down. Those people can call us anything and we don't have any right to get insulted. They're on our side.

"Okay, the Dodgers are bums but not lucky bums," Medwick insists. "We went out and got the pennant for ourselves," he said, "we didn't back into it. And we didn't squawk like the Cardinals did. They said we had an easy schedule toward the finish while the Cardinals were playing those tough Western teams. So what? We licked those tough Western teams earlier in the season while the Cardinals were fattening up on the weak Eastern clubs. We played the Pirates, Reds and Cubs as many time as the Cardinals did."

Injuries Didn't Hurt Cards

The pet pique of Bum Medwick has been the continual reference to the Cardinals' injuries while the Dodgers were able to escape accidents to key players. "That's a lot of rot," said Medwick, "about the Cardinals being weakened. Sure, they had players hurt, and what happened? They put in fellows like Crabtree and that young Hopp and that kid Musial and those guys played better ball for the Cardinals than the regulars had been playing. They were a better ball team with those substitutes in there and the record proves it. The Cardinals don't have any squawk coming. The only player they missed was Terry Moore."

Medwick says he was glad to escape from St. Louis via the $175,000 deal that sent him to the Dodgers in the early summer of 1940. "There's something about Brooklyn that gives a ball player a lift," he was saying. "Any ball player will tell you he can play better ball when there's a crowd in the park. Those empty stands in St. Louis are enough to depress you. We were in second place a couple of years ago and only one St. Louis baseball writer went East with us on our third Eastern trip of the season, and he went along chiefly to go to one of the big fights. These Brooklyn baseball writers root for the club and that makes it nicer."

Back in '34-'35-'36 when they were colleagues with the old Cardinal Gas House Gang, Medwick and Leo Durocher were roommates. As members of the Bums, they don't room together any more. Medwick explains that "We're great friends, but what the heck, Leo's the manager and I'm just a ball player. It isn't good for a ball club when one ball player gets too pally with a manager. With Leo it's just 'Hi, Leo,' and 'Hi, Joe,' and not a whole lot more. It's better that way."

Durocher Understands Players

There are men among the Bums who are something less than saints, Medwick confesses, but Durocher can be indulgent. "Leo never kept any secrets from us," said Medwick. "When he had something to say to any one of us, he said it before the whole gang. If some fellow stayed out too late, Leo wouldn't take him aside. He'd let him have it during those meetings we held. If you wanted to stay out late, all you had to do was ask him, and find him a good guy. He didn't want any secrets on the club. He wanted to know what was going on."

The let-down after the Dodgers clinched the pennant in Boston was wonderful, Medwick was saying. "The lid was off and anything went, Durocher told us. That train back to Brooklyn must have wobbled. We were riding into Brooklyn bareback until Durocher said we'd better dress up again on account of the crowd that was at the station. There wasn't a shirt on anybody's back. Somebody cut my necktie off right at the knot. We bums were on the gravy train."

No, the Bums haven't been giving much thought to the Yankees or the World Series, said Bum Medwick. "We had that pennant on our mind. We'll start thinking about the Yankees in a couple of days. They're a pretty good ball team I understand. Us bums are pretty good, too. We've got a pretty good idea of the Yanks. We beat the daylights out of 'em last spring in Florida. They tell us those Yanks scare those other American League clubs out of ball games before they start. They'll have to beat our Bums without scaring us. We don't scare easy; in fact our Bums don't scare at all not after what we've been through."

12,000 to See Virginia and Lafayette Play

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 26.—The football squads of the University of Virginia and Lafayette College paraded in light pre-game drills this afternoon, preparing to revive their 50-year-old relationship here tomorrow at 2:30 daylight time.

Approximately 12,000 persons are expected to witness the intersectional clash, which will be the season's opener for Lafayette, undefeated 1940 national offensive leaders of college football.

The Maroons made a late afternoon arrival to test the Scott Stadium footing for the resumption of a rivalry dating back to a two-game series of early '30's, the Cavaliers were winners of one of those old time meetings and the other was a tie. There have been no intervening games and this one shapes up as an even battle.

Two starters of last week's Hampden-Sydney game were missing when Coach Frank Murray reviewed Cavalier assignments, Johnny Neff, quarterback and Nick Schlegel, tackle, being out because of illness.

Mrs. Moorman Wins Golf Play

Mrs. D. L. Moorman, after tying with Mrs. D. H. Henderson in the match play against par at Congressional Club yesterday, won the toss and thus became the victor. Both entries had 1 down to par. Mrs. P. J. Winkler was third, 3 down to par.

Prize for lowest number of putts went to Mrs. C. J. Wilkinson, with 29.

Auburn Overpowers Howard College, 13-0

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 26 (AP).—Auburn's 1941 gridiron outfit overpowered Howard College of Birmingham, 13-0, tonight in a season-opener played in summer-like weather before approximately 10,000 fans.

Harkins plunged over from the 4 in the intial period, and Irby (sub for Reynolds) romped through right tackle for 12 and Auburn's second touchdown in the fourth. Harkins kicked one extra point, missed the second.

Royals Win Little World Series Opener

By International News Service

Montreal, Sept. 26.—The Montreal Royals of the International League rapped out a 12-to-6 victory over Columbus of the American Association tonight in the first game of the little world series witnessed by 10,000 fans.

While Macon held Columbus to nine safeties, his teammates nipped a trio of Columbus hurlers for 14, including three circuit clouts.

In the first, Campbell walked, Corbitt beat out a slow roller and Jensen was purposely passed to fill the bases. Powell walked, forcing in Campbell, and Kampouris cleaned the bases with a home run.

Campbell opened the second inning with a four-bagger and Dickson the loser, was replaced by Gabler. Corbitt doubled, Hughes singled and Corbitt came home when Graham grounded out. Jensen singled to score Hughes.

Graham homered in the third to score Macon and Campbell ahead of him. Gabler gave way to Naham on the mound for Columbus.

After scoring two runs in the third and one in the sixth, Columbus staged a vain 3-run uprising in the eighth. A double by Haas scored Repass and Sanders but he was put out trying for another base. Klein walked, Jones singled and was forced at second by Marshall, but Klein scored on the play.

Minnesota Makes '41 Bow Against U. of Washington Today

Many Good Attractions On Program

Gophers Possess Another Strong Club; Michigan Plays State Rivals

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Sept. 26.—It is a bit difficult to concentrate on football in our personal cubbyhole today. Off in one corner Lou Nova is doing deep-breathing exercises. Right across the way Joe Louis is scrambling the ears of a game, if anonymous, partner. In between are a string of tail-spinning figures which look like dancing dervishes, but turn out to be normally delirious Dodger fans.

However, a few moments of study turns up the fact that tomorrow's college program is one that can't be ignored. The schedule makers who used to let the football forecasters warm up to their work gradually have got completely off that beam, and there are games on tap within the next 24 hours that would do justice to late November, let alone September.

Overshadowing them all is the 1941 debut of Minnesota, No. 1 team in the land a year ago, reputedly as strong if not more so. The Gophers open against Washington and anything may happen, especially on the Huskies' home grounds.

70,000 Fans Due

With only the East lagging behind in games of major caliber, the Midwest will take the attendance prize, with 70,000 due at Ann Arbor to see Harmon-less Michigan play Michigan State; the South will offer a double-barreled intersectional attraction, with Boston College meeting Tulane and Holy Cross tackling Louisiana State, and the Southwest Conference will send its prime favorite, Texas, into the mountains to meet Colorado.

Jumping from generalities to brass tacks (with the hope we don't sit on any) here are this corner's inaugural predictions of the season (home teams given first, probable attendance in parentheses):

WASHINGTON - MINNESOTA (42,000)—They say Bruce Smith may lead the Gophers even higher than George Franck did a year ago. This brings up the question of "how high is up?" High enough, probably, for a Minnesota victory over a team strong in the first string but said to be shy on reserves.

TULANE - BOSTON COLLEGE (50,000)—B. C. has a new coach and a fine sophomore tackle in Gil Rouley. But it has lost a platoon of front-line Sugar Bowl operatives. It may be little more than a hunch, but this choice goes to Tulane to make up for last fall's licking.

NOTRE DAME-ARIZONA (45,000)—Frank Leahy, the coach B. C. lost, unwraps his first Irish team. Arizona may be the top-ranking club in the border conference, but there should be a lot of confused young men returning to Tucson tomorrow night.

STANFORD-OREGON (35,000)—Stanford still has Shaughnessy, Albert, Kimetovic, Vuccinich and—the T. Oregon is rated a sleeper, but—Stanford.

MICHIGAN-MICHIGAN STATE (70,000)—Veterans are plentiful at State, and Michigan has neither Harmon nor Evashevski. Still, Michigan.

COLORADO - TEXAS (18,000)—Should be little more than a long trip and a workout for Texas.

NAVY-WILLIAM AND MARY (15,000) — With the graduation speed-up due to hit them shortly, this looks like the Middies' last chance for a big winner for some time to come. They'll make the most of it, Navy.

OHIO STATE-MISSOURI (50,000)—A new coach at Ohio State, new—and sophomore—talent at Missouri. Taking Ohio.

LOUISIANA STATE-HOLY CROSS (36,000)—L. S. U. to make it three straight, though it may not be so easy as the last two years.

CALIFORNIA-ST. MARY'S (45,000)—The Bears have a new shift and a grand back in Jim Jurkovich. Out of a hat, California.

DUKE-WAKE FOREST (15,000)—Duke, without too much trouble.

PURDUE-VANDERBILT (18,000)—Anybody's guess. Purdue.

MISSISSIPPI STATE-FLORIDA (15,000)—State, against a team that promises to produce lots of open-field fireworks.

INDIANA-DETROIT (15,000)—The varsity bow of Billy Hillenbrand, another of those sophomore backfield prodigies, and a likely win for Indiana.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA-OREGON STATE (35,000)—The death of Howard Jones was a sad blow to the Trojans. But the material he was priming for a U. S. C. comeback still is there. Southern Cal.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN - TULSA (7500)—Dutch Meyer, they say, is ready to bring T. C. U. up to the Baugh-O'Brien heights again. A good place to start climbing, so—T. C. U.

NORTH CAROLINA - SOUTH CAROLINA (12,000)—To revise an old gag, looks like the Governor of South Carolina will be saying, "It's a long time between touchdowns." North Carolina.

Roosevelt High Swamped, 39-0, At Richmond

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Sept. 28.—Starting where they left off at the end of an undefeated, unscored-on season in 1940, the John Marshall High School Justices opened their season today with a 39-0 victory over Roosevelt High of Washington, D. C., before a crowd of 1000 rain-soaked fans.

Scoring almost at will, the Justices ran up their score in the first three periods of play. Late in the fourth the Roosevelt team launched a drive against the John Marshall reserves that carried from its own 21-yard line to the Justices' 37 before the first stringers were rushed back into the game to stop the visitors' march.

Capt. Koester, Roosevelt fullback, was the outstanding player on the Roosevelt team, both on offense and defense.

John Marshall unleashed a powerful running attack in the second and third quarters that accounted for 13 and 19 points, respectively. Ed Saxby and fleet Ray Marshall contributed two touchdowns apiece.

Coach Dick Esleeck sent his reserves into the game in the last quarter, but rushed his regulars back when the Washington team combined a tricky passing attack with some fancy stepping by quarterback Bobby Stein to threaten the Justices. John Marshall's first string halted the march, however, and was headed goalward when the game ended.

W.-L. High Scores Over Gonzaga, 19-0

Gardner Is Hero for Winners, Making Two Touchdowns; Raba's Punts High Spot

The football warriors of Washington-Lee High, of Arlington, launched their 1941 season yesterday in the same manner that they closed 1940—by beating Gonzaga. The score was 19-0, only slightly more stinging than the 20-7 lacing Gonzaga absorbed as it bowed in a post-season charity game last year.

More than 2000 fans, almost as many as saw last year's finale, turned out to watch the home club win as it pleased. It used every player on its bench. And in addition to the three touchdowns credited to them, the Little Generals scored another which was called back. Big star of the day was a newcomer to the Arlington eleven, Johnny Gardiner, who scored twice and added an extra point for 13 points.

The Purple made one threat—and no more. The remainder of the time it was fighting off W.-L. attacks on its goal, with Elmer Raba's booming punts their best defense.

As a matter of fact, Raba, the losers' highly regarded triple-threat, was little more than a single-threat yesterday. He averaged a little over 40 yards on his kicks, but his passes weren't clicking and he was botfled on every run by a husky and determined W.-L. line.

Gonzaga kicked to the Little Generals at the start, and there occurred their first scoring chance. Eddie Decelle, one of 14 lettermen on the W.-L. squad, fumbled and saw the ball pounced on by a horde of Gonzagans. Three rushes and a fourth down pass couldn't reach pay territory and the ball changed hands.

Gardner Scores

It was lanky, red-headed Jim Sprinkle who first found Gonzaga's goal. From the Gonzaga 44, the Little Generals moved in three firts downs to the 2, where Sprinkle banged at right tackle for six points shortly after the opening of the second period. N. Wilson pulled out of the line and missed the placement.

After repeated W.-L. pushes had been staved off with penalties and Raba's kicks, the hosts got their second 2-pointer midway of the third session. Passes of 26 and 15 yards from Sprinkle to Winfield and DeCelle brought the ball to the Gonzaga 28, DeCelle swung around left end and scored standing up. Again Wilson missed his placement.

Final W.-L. scoring came on the first play of the last period, as the hosts rested on their foes' 20. Glenn Smith wound up and hurled to Gardner, who grabbed the ball on the 10 and hurdled Raba as he fell over the line. Gardner added the extra point.

Bill Gartrell Rolls 247 Game For Virtual Bowling Record

Denied a lasting fame for the reason he was not rolling in sanctioned competition, but merely for the fun of it, William C. (Bill) Gartrell, manager of the Takoma Recreation Center, yesterday afternoon rolled what is undoubtedly the highest score ever attained in duckpin bowling, a tremendous and precedent-shattering 247.

Stringing together eleven marks in a row, the last a strike on top of a spare in the tenth box, Gartrell's game by boxes was as follows:

The official record for a single game of duckpins is 239, a record posted by Eddie Funaro, New Haven, Conn., last January 11, in the Jack White Tournament in that city.

Gartrell, however, has further claim to fame as his total for the three games of the set was 557, unofficially upping the recognized record by 39 pins. The recognized record for a set is 518, rolled by Wally Pipp—not the former Yankee first baseman—in Hartford, Conn. Gartrell had games of 147,247 and 163, scoring 22 marks in the three games and, with the strike in the final box of the second game, 23 in all.

High scoring is not a new thrill for Gartrell as two years ago he was credited with a single of 210 which is included among those bare two dozen bowlers who, in the history of duckpins, have attained that total. He is a member of the 200 Club and wears the honor medal given by Arville Ebersole, executive secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, for those totaling 200 or better in sanctioned play.

Well-Balanced Terp Eleven Faces Tigers

The best-balanced Maryland football team since 1937 and the pristine days of Jarrin' Jim Meade will open its season today at 3 p. m. at College Park against Hampden-Sydney which last year spoiled the Terps' inaugural by winning, 7-6. Maryland hopes to use a two-team system.

The Tigers have another of their small, undermanned but exceptionally spirited squads, but by no stretch of the imagination do they appear able to duplicate last year's stunning upset. Hampden-Sydney lost its opener last week to Virginia, 41-0.

Sophomores Hold Key

Sophomores appear to hold the key to Maryland's success. Three of these varsity yearlings will be in the starting backfield, and the other at end. Upon Left Halfback Jack Wright the Old Liners' will depend greatly. The fourth member of the backfield and its only seasoned player, Bernie Ulman, will do little more than block. Lone sophomore on the line is Bob James, a lanky youngster who seems a natural to make good in his first varsity year.

Big gun of the Maryland backfield will be Wright, a powerfully built 205-pound redhead who is a near certain bet to crack any line.

Wright will be handicapped in his line plunging by the double wing system from which Maryland runs most of its plays, but by the same token his accurate passing will take on added threats. Coaches Jack Faber, Al Heagy and Al Woods plan extensive use of the double wing formation because of their material which is light, but fast and shifty and includes several kinds who can really throw the ball around.

Besides Wright, the best Maryland passers are Mearle DuVall, a senior, and Jack Brenner, who will be held in reserve for just that purpose. As a freshman, DuVall was rated one of the greatest backs ever to enroll at Maryland, but never has been able to hit his stride. A trick knee bothered him all last season, but that trouble seemingly has has been fixed by an operation, and he has shown flashes of brilliance in practice. DuVall, running and passing at top form, could be the making of Maryland's offense.

Brooklyn Hoping Grid Dodgers Will Mimic 'Dem Bums'

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Now that the baseball Dodgers have hit the jackpot after 21 years, maybe the Brooklyn football Dodgers will get into the spirit of the thing and win their first pro championship in history.

The Dodgers are starting their twelfth year in the National League, but have never finished better than second. Jock Sutherland sends his charges against the Eagles at Philadelphia tomorrow night and a victory would tie the Dodgers with Green Bay for the top spot, Brooklyn having already won its opener. But if the Eagles win the Dodgers drop to third place.

Another game Saturday night pits the Detroit Lions against the Cardinals at Chicago. Neither team has won a game and the loser will take sole possession of the league cellar.

The Cards barely missed whipping the Cleveland Rams in their only start so far, while Detroit has lost to Green Bay and Brooklyn.

These are the last night games on the 1941 schedule, all other contests being scheduled for Sunday afternoon.

'New' Colonial Eleven Makes Debut Today

Veteran George Washington football fans may find it a bit hard to recognize the 1942 Colonial edition in its opening game today with Mount St. Mary's at Griffith Stadium. Kickoff is set for 2:30 p. m.

Coach Bill Reinhart, ever experimenting both with players and systems, has a brand new backfield formation which he may test today against his "breather" opposition. The new system is similar to the Notre Dame "box" and, judging from recent practice, it has added greatly to the Colonial's striking power, especially over the tackles. The G. W's. also may pop up with a cycle of plays from a variation of the 'T.'

Fedora Is Keyman

Keyman in the George Washington offensive will be talented Walter Fedora, a streamlined triple-threat fullback who developed quickly last season and apparently is still progressing as a ball carrier. When Fedora is not in the George Washington line-up, his place will be taken by Don Pinnow, a nice-looking sophomore runner and passer. Rounding out the Buff starting backfield will be veterans Paul Nugent, at blocking back, and Scott Gudmundson and Burnell Martinson, halfbacks.

Although George Washington expects to win today, and win handily, it will not take the field overconfident, for fresh in the memory of most of the Colonials is last year's inaugural with the Emmittsburg eleven. In that game a heavily-favored G. W. team was held scoreless for a half and was fairly extended to win, 12-0.

Slightly Improved

Generally, your 1941 George Washington eleven shapes up as slightly improved over last year, though it may not be able to show that improvement today. For the team will go into the battle minus two regulars, Johnny Picco at end, and Dan Snyder at tackle, and also Floyd McGlinn, a dependable guard.

Mount St. Mary's, coached by Bull Draper, the former Western Maryalnd star, is expected to display a sensational young back in Gene Fuhrman, who, in his first varsity game last week, scored the touchdown that beat Potomac State, 6-0.

Johnnies Win First Game, 7-2, Over G.W.High

Marching 75 yards with the opening kickoff, St. John's High eleven accounted for the points which made its season opener a huge success last night at Alexandria, eventually nosing out George Washington High by a 7-2 count before more than 4000 noisy fans.

It was Harold Krug, veteran plunger, who spearheaded the Johnnies' winning drive. With the game still in its infancy, Krug took a reverse from Buddy Speiss and slithered 5 yards through the line for a touchdown. Fullback Tommy Chisari booted a perfect placement to close out St. John's scoring.

From that point on the Cadets took the defensive, and their tactics paid off. G. W.'s only tally came in the last period.

Attempting to kick from behind his own goal after a G. W. drive had been halted on the 1-yard marker, George Hughes, husky end, was mobbed by the Presidents. The ball rolled under the end zone stands for an automatic safety.

That ended a G. W. advance that had started on its own 45. Johnny Shelton featured the march with a 19-yard twist around right end when Chisari came through too fast to make the tackle, putting the ball on the St. John's 6. Three power plays and a pass, Shelton to Noble Stewart, could reach no farther than the 1-yard line.

The Johnnies' big slices of territory as they scored were credited to Chisari (good for 20 yards off tackle to the G. W. 37), a pass from Speiss to Krug (good for 17 yards to the G. W. 20), and Krug's shovel pass to Chigari (good for 15 yards to the G. W. five.)

Navy Eleven in Debut Against W.-M. Today

18,000 Fans Expected to Witness Clash At Annapolis; Middies Are Favored

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 26.—Navy's gridiron fleet, given No. 3 rating in the East, makes its debut at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow against William and Mary in Thompson Stadium before an expected crowd of 18,000.

Navy fans feel this season is the Middies' big chance to go places in the pigskin world and they'll be out in full force to witness the premiere.

The Tars, heavier and packing more reserve strength than the Virginians, are favored to win the institutions' sixteenth gridiron clash. William and Mary, victor in only one of the series' contests, lost last year, 19-7.

Navy's starting eleven averages 193 pounds, against the Indians' 180. The Williamsburg lads will feel their weight disadvantage in the forward wall, with Navy's first line of defense packing 198 pounds average per man to the Indians' 182.

The Virginians have a good set of backs but a comparatively light, inexperienced line to open the way for the pigskin luggers. They also have a limited number of reserves. The Middies have four teams.

But what the Indians lack in manpower, they'll surely make up in fighting spirit. The sailors'll know it's a ball game, sure enough. Last year against Navy, which ranked No. 1 defensively in the Nation, the Virginians held a 7-6 lead at the end of the third quarter.

Swede Larson, Middie coach, is out to break his backs loose in the open, something he wasn't able to do very much in '40. He's cut down the number of players to effect more precision and finesse in the ones employed.

And if there's any broken field running tomorrow by Navy backs, it'll probably be done either by Bill Busik, Howie Clark or Wes Gebert, the gridiron "oomph" boys.

Field Hockey Opens Play Here Today

The Washington Field Hockey Association will open its tenth season with a double-barrelled program this weekend. Meeting today at 10 a. m. on the field of Mount Vernon Seminary and tomorrow at 3 p. m. on the Ellipse, the association urges all women interested in playing hockey to attend either meeting.

Looking forward to the most active season of its history, the association will expand its program to provide opportunity for recreation for the many women new to the city. The association is prepared to furnish equipment and instruction.

Affiliated with the United States Field Hockey Association, the local group engages in sectional tournaments. Games are scheduled this season with Philadelphia, Baltimore, Harrisburg and Lancaster, and the association will send two teams to the Southeast sectional tournament to be held at Sweet Briar, November 14 to 16.

Giants 8-5 Choice In Redskin Debut

D. C. Pros Ready for Gala Opener Tomorrow At Stadium; 35,000 Expected to See Game

If you like the Redskins against the Giants tomorrow afternoon you can get 7 to 5 and, giving the football betting commissioners the usual edge, if you like the Giants you must lay 8 to 5 that they will be Eastern co-leaders by Sunday night.

The odds are based on the Giants' record to date, which includes an impressive 24-0 league victory over the Philadelphia Eagles and exhibition game performances, namely a 23-3 triumph over the Eastern all-stars, a 17-17 tie with the Green Bay Packers, a 14-8 loss to the Chicago Bears and two one-sided decisions over the Kenosha Cardinals and Springfield Pros.

The Giant rookies, reported to be one of the best first-year crops in the club's history, add to their favoritism over the untested newcomers to the Redskin squad.

With only two intra-squad games under their belt and a 30-0 triumph over a so-called all-star team from the Pacific Coast, the Redskins enter the competition as an unknown quantity to the rest of the league.

They are still tops in local esteem, however, as yesterday the remaining 5500 seats for Sunday's opener slowly dwindled away and the game figures to be a sellout, which means 35,000 fans and a $50,000 gate.

Bob Masterson missed the 90-minute defensive drill yesterday morning at Griffith Stadium, as he was out with a cold but barring complications he will be back today and make a full 33-man squad ready for the Giants. Ed Justice and Ki Aldrich each had a short session with Trainer Doc Mauro but were reported fit.

The team took in the Georgetown-Mississippi game last night and a following dress rehearsal this morning will have some 24-hours to get a mad-on for their perennial opening game foes.

General Manager Jack Espey has already lined up a supporting card which lends a circus atmosphere to the game itself, and from noon tomorrow, when the gates open, until the closing whistle there will not be a dull moment.

Coaches Flaherty and Edwards will take the afternoon train for Philadelphia where they will scout the Dodgers, next Sunday's foe, against the Eagles tonight.

Central Wins Opener From Bullis, 7 to 0

A fourth-period touchdown by "Big Jim" Kurz and an extra point by Cocaptain Jack Samperton gave Central High School a 7-0 victory over Bullis Prep yesterday at the Central Stadium before a meager crowd of 500 in the season's opener.

The score came after a 35-yard drive by the Vikings. Central gained possession of the ball on the Bullis' 30-yard line, from which point successive line smashes by Right Halfback Mike Denikos brought the ball to the 5-yard line.

At this point, Central was penalized 5 yards for being offside. But on the next play Kurz, Central's pile-driving fullback, plunged over his own right tackle for the score.

Neither team was able to break through the other's stubborn defense and at no time during the first three-quarters was either in danger.

Central's running attack, effective only in spots, was more than made up by excellent pass defense work. Denikos alone intercepted three Bullis passes.

In Tom Rooney and Elliot Rosenberg, Bullis boasted a passing combination which clicked often and registered Bullis' only real threat to Central.

Maroc Captures Fourth Race at Havre de Grace, Pays $8.80

Bedwell's Clingendaal Runs Second

Victory Is First In 16 Starts for Winner; Becomly Finishes Third

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 26.—The first 15 races this year proved the hardest for Maroc, a 5-year-old son of Sting. At any rate, Maroc was unable to win in any of those tests. But today was another day and he galloped home an easy winner in the fourth race, the outstanding event on a featureless program. Maroc, with Jockey M. N. Gonzalez, in the saddle came to the imaginary wire three lengths in front of H. G. Bedwell's Clingendaal, a horse that delegated him here. Another length away came W. J. Susini's Becomly. Nine other good sprinters competed in the test of 6 furlongs.

Maroc was coupled in the betting with Slow Motion, a stablemate, and brought his backers an $8.80 mutuel. His time for the three quarters of a mile was a snappy 1:12 3-5. The usual weekday crowd of 8000 saw the action.

Spill Marks Race

A spectacular spill marked the race but caused no damage except the elimination from the event of Hrs. R. H. Heighe's Zenana.

It was "wake-up-day" in more ways than one. Harry Neusteter's Bogert, unable to win in 42 starts over a period of two years, found himself in the unfamiliar winner's circle after the fifth race. With Jockey Robert Howell in the saddle, Bogert lost the lead in the stretch to Time Sheet but rallied again and came up to defeat his rival by a neck. Key Man was third. The winner paid a juicy $20.40 mutuel.

Double Returns $466.20

Speaking of juicy mutuels, the daily double returned $466.20 for the usual deuce investment. The combination was that of "5 and 8." H. G. Bedwell's Our Blen stuck to his running guns long enough to win the first race by a head margin over Edward Arkanan's John A, the latter a "hot thing." In third position was the Cedar Farm's Witness Stand. John A was claimed out of the race by R. B. Archer for $2000. The winner paid $36.20.

Havre de Grace Selections

Dear Al:

Jockeys Jack Westrope and George Woolf will not ride at both Belmont and Havre de Grace today as they had hoped. They planned to pilot horses in the Futurity and then fly here for mounts in the Havre de Grace Handicap. This would have been possible had Belmont carded the Futurity as the fourth race with the Havre de Grace the sixth race. Local racing Secretary Charles McLennan phoned Alfred C. Vanderbilt at Belmont but the president of the track explained that since the Jockey Club Cup had attracted little aside from Whirlaway, he was forced to place the Futurity as seventh on the card. The situation is very embarrassing for Westrope, who has an agreement to ride Big Pebble for the Circle M. Ranch whenever the horse runs. He also signed to ride one of Trainer John Gaver's charges in the Futurity. Westrope is likely to get in a jam either way he goes. Woolf, who who is here with the W. L. Brann Stable but is not under contract, had agreed to ride the Woolford Farm's Contradiction in the Futurity and will have to do so, regardless of the fact he would rather have the mount on Brann's Pictor here. If you want to winter horses at an ideal place, Chris Wood, jr., and Celeste Van Lennep have an 88-acre farm at Newtown Square, Pa. They have room for 20 horses and have a half-mile training track. If interested, phone Newtown Square 538. George Brown, jr., will be the third steward in the stand at Laurel, opening next Wednesday. Thomas Healey will represent the track and William L. Harron will represent the commission. I forgot to tell youth Challedon is out on the Pacific Coast and I heard while there that he will be put back in training, with the $100,000 Santa Anita as his goal. Everybody on the West Coast was asking about Jockey Sonny Workman. I guess I was right when I told them that he had retired. I understand Marlboro is going to built a new grandstand for next year. I still would like to have the right to building a clubhouse on that hill with tables placed on terraces. Such a layout would draw many big money players from Washington who have been staying away. However, I was glad to hear that Marlboro had a good meeting. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—MISS HAPPY was in trouble last out but the race previous she won in very good time. A repeater of that first effort will be good enough for me. FAIR HERO was a winner in good time and is strictly the one to beat. POINDEXTER was messed about in the opening half of that last effort and may be tough.

Second race—ELDER has not started since the Eastern Shore Handicap but has trained well enough to beat this field. MAR D'ESPRIT has plenty of early foot but may not be able to outlast the top one. PINCH HITTER will likely improve.

Third race—DAUDERKIN came from far back to be second in that most recent start and should have no trouble taking care of these. This looks like the safest wager of the day. YELLOW DRAGON has plenty of foot but weakened last out. BATTLE STAR could be a factor.

Fourth race—SKIN DEEP ran a whale of a race to finish third to Bill Farnsworth and My Bill. If alertly handled, I believe this is the right one. DOMKIN was an impressive winner last out but is stepping up. RONCAT is coming off a distance affair.

Fifth race—MASKED GENERAL showed a good race in his first start for some time and figures to improve enough off that effort to take the main money here. ALLESSANDRO was second to Abrasion going three quarters and should prefer the added distance. ICE WATER won in fine fashion last out.

Sixth race—BIG PEBBLE looks like the best handicap horse of the year so he figures to have little trouble with a field like this. He has proven in his trials that the track is to his liking. CAPE COD has plenty of speed and may surprise and hold on to take a share of the purse. PICTOR has worked as well as anything on the grounds and can be placed no farther back then third.

Seventh race—If CHARLENE can run to those impressive works, I see nothing in this field that is likely to beat her. BUSY FINGERS is strictly the horse to beat, but I believe the top one has a little too much class. STRAMER is ready for a good race.

Eighth race—This is a cheap field but something has to win it so I look for SUN LARK to close the meeting. BRAXTON has a good race to recommend and figures to be the contender. BRIGHT SONINA might surprise and take a share. Best bet—LAUDERKIN.

Byrd Cards 66 in Golf At Providence

By the Associated Press

Providence, R. I., Sept. 26.—Sammy Byrd, in particular, and the country's leading professionals, in general, went on a par-breaking spree here today as the city of Providence Open golf tournament was started on its 72-hole journey.

Byrd, former Yankees and Browns outfielder playing out of Philadelphia, whittled six strokes off par with his 31, 36—66, established a new competitive record for the Triggs Memorial course and assumed a one-shot lead over Clayton Heafner, of Linville, N. C.

While Byrd was contributing the major thrills, 19 other professionals and one amateur, Skee Riegel, of Glendale, Calif., were giving par such an overhauling that the nine who matched the card were tied for second place.

Commodities Generally Edge Higher

By the Associated Press

Commodity futures prices generally edged higher as traders attempted to balance continued talk of wartime and postwar demand against depressing influences, such as price control possibilities, profits limitations and hedging.

New York cotton futures, however, lost 80 to 95 cents a bale under a rush of Southern selling.

At Chicago, wheat lost early gains to close ⅝ to ¾ of a cent a bushel higher, corn rose ¼ to ⅝ of a cent, and soybeans were unchanged to 3¼ cents a bushel ahead. Livestock prices were steady to lower, hogs losing 10 to 15 cents a hundredweight and lambs as much as 25 cents a hundred.

World sugar contracts advanced .04 to .06 of a cent a pound on reports of a possible scarcity of supplies.

The rest of the list was unsettled, wool tops closing irregular, cottonseed oil moving up a shade, and cocoa dropping slightly.

The Associated Press index of 35 spot staples eased to 92.58 per cent of the 1926 average from 92.59 per cent the day before.

Working Hours Still Under '29 Average Week

By the United Press

New York, Sept. 26.—The national industrial conference board estimated today that, despite the demands for defense materials, the average wage earner in 25 American manufacturing industries worked only 41 hours a week in July as compared with 48.4 hours a week in July of 1929, a boom year.

The survey showed that in none of the 25 was the average work week of July this year as long as the average in the 1929 month. The board, a private research organization, said several of the 25 industries were vital to defense.

In the iron and steel industry, wage earners averaged 37.9 hours a week in July, this year, against 54.8 in July, 1929, the report said.

"Despite urgent demand for cotton goods, the Northern cotton mills' average working time in July, 1941, was 40.2 hours per week, as compared with 48.5 hours in July, 1929, a decrease of 8.3 hours," the board reported.

Other decreases for the two compared months included meat packing, 13.5 hours a week, automobiles, 11.7 hours, silk, 9.7 hours; chemicals, 7.2 hours; paper and pulp, 8.1 hours; agricultural implements, 6.6 hours; lumber and millwork, 6.5 hours, and rubber, 6.2 hours.

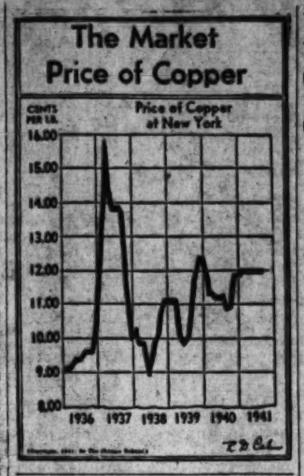
The electrical equipment and foundries and machine shops industries, heavily engaged in national defense work, came closer to working 1929 hours than any other of the 25 surveyed.

Electrical equipment workers spent 44 hours a week on the job in 1941, compared with 47.2 hours in July, 1929. In foundries and machine shops the average working time in July of this year was 45.7 hours a week, compared with 49.2 hours in July, 1929. Included in the latter industry were machine tool workers, who averaged 49.4 hours a week compared with 50.1 in the 1929 month.

Only two of the industries surveyed showed a shorter work week in July of this year as compared with July of 1940. They were the meat packing and lumber and millwork divisions.

Chain Shoe Store Sales Up

The Commerce Deartment estimates that sale of chain shoe stores rose 8 per cent from July to August instead of declining as is customary at this season. August sales were 21 per cent higher than in the similar month last year.



C.&P. to Spend $2,177,000 More in D. C.

Expenditures totaling $2,177,000 for the construction of telephone plant and installation of equipment in the District were authorized by the directors of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. at their monthly meeting, according to a statment of Charles A. Robinson, vice president and general manager, yesterday.

This brings the total authorized for expenditures for the first nine months of 1941 to $11,851,000, an increase of 49 per cent over the same period in 1940. Mr. Robinson pointed out that this increase was due almost entirely to telephone expansion resulting from national defense activities.

Approximately $1,422,000 of the amount authorized at the meeting will be spent for the day-to-day work of installing disconnecting and moving telephone facilities on subscribers' premises and for minor outside plant construction during the fourth quarter of 1941.

A total of $154,000 was approved for the installation of additional cable facilities in several sections of the city where rapid telephone growth has occurred.

Emergency Zinc Pool Quotas for October Set

By the Associated Press

Donald M. Nelson, Defense Priorities director, yesterday fixed the emergency zinc pool quotas for October, requiring that producers of metallic zinc set aside an amount equal to 27 per cent of their August production.

This will amount to about 20,400 short tons, officials said. The amount is approximately the same as the September pool. Zinc set aside for the pool is allocated by the Priorities Division.

Car, Truck Production Set at 78,535 Units

Detroit, Sept. 26 (AP).—Ward's Reports, Inc., estimated today that car and truck production this week would total 78,535 units, highest level of the new-model year. The total compared with 60,610 assemblies last week and 95,990 at this time last year. The survey said a further rise was indicated, with mid-October assemblies close to the top levels fixed by the Office of Production Management.

Rails Report Continuation Of Increase

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 26.—Railroad earnings reports today displayed a continuation of sharp business increases over the first eight months of 1940, good-sized net profits in many cases replacing losses in the comparable period.

Several roads which failed to report net income for the period had operating incomes well above 1940 figures.

A bigger volume of business from defense material shipments, troop transfers and increasing passenger traffic, attributed both to defense and to higher national income, generally were credited with bringing the improvement.

The Illinois Central System showed one of the best gains for the eight-month period, reporting a net income of $7,049,620 as, compared with a loss of $2,883,071 in the first eight months of 1940.

Other eight month reports included:

	1941.	1940.

Union Pacific	10,783,479	6,891,574

A comparison of the net operating incomes of other roads with figures for the 1940 eight-month period indicated similar increases.

Banks Attain Record High For Deposits

Washington's banks reached an all-time high in aggregate deposits yesterday, according to a compilation made following a call by the United States Comptroller of Currency on condition of banks. With every one of the 22 banks here showing an increase, the grand total soared to $477,436,175.94 in comparison with $450,695,062.34 for last June 30.

This tremendous gain is ascribed to the rapid growth of the city and business boom here due to national defense activities. It has been known for some time that deposits were climbing steadily in Washington banks but the size of the increase caused general surprise in financial circles.

Structural Steel Shipments Up

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Shipments of fabricated structural steel during August totaled 176,057 tons, compared with 134,858 tons shipped in August of 1940, the American Institute of Steel Construction reported today.

New orders booked during the month totaled 154,793 tons, smallest of any month this year but well above the 122,468 tons booked in August, 1940.

The institute estimated tonnage shipped in 1941, through August, at 1,449,408, compared with 916,990 in the same period last year. Orders booked in the 1941 eight months were set at 1,665,689 tons against 936,639 in the 1940 period.

The industry's backlog as of September 1 was 754,340 tons, all scheduled for delivery within the following four months, the institute said.

Closing Stock Prices Irregularly Lower; Dow Chemical Drops to New 1941 Low

New York, Sept. 26.—The stock market displayed a little better balance today after yesterday's relapse but the list as a whole was unable to do much on the recovery side.

Mild comeback tendencies appeared at the start. Light selling then cropped up here and there and scattered weak spots were in evidence around midday. A few rails, coppers, aircraft and utilities managed to edge forward in the latter part of the session although closing prices were irregularly lower.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off .2 of a point at 42.8. Of 721 stocks traded, 298 were off, 207 up and 216 unchanged. Transfers dwindled to 486,380 shares compared with 1,169,090 the day before, when prices were suffering one of their worst slumps of the year to date.

The Treasury's advocacy of a 6 per cent ceiling on corporate profits as an anti-inflation measure remained the principal chilling influence for bullish forces, brokers said. While many in Wall Street felt strong opposition to the proposal was likely in Congress, opinions were heard that taxes or other restrictions would be used to keep war earnings to slim proportions and thus handicap the ordinary run of shareholders.

The war news again left markets unexcited and business developments generally were without a great deal of influence.

Dow Chemical was a soft spot among stocks, dropping 8¾ points to a new 1941 bottom. The issue began to sink when rights for the purchase of a new stock offering by the company were listed for trading at noon.

Alaska Juneau also hit a new low when directors omitted a quarterly dividend. Bethlehem Steel lost 1½ at 65½, a new low for the year.

Recessions of fractions to a point or so were recorded by General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, American Telephone, J. I. Case, United Aircraft, Consolidated Aircraft, duPont, Westinghouse, American Can, Pepsi-Cola, American Smelting and J. C. Penney.

Finishing with modest advances were Sante Fe, New York Central, Great Northern, Kennecott, Cerro de Pasco, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, General Electric, Philip Morris, Douglas Aircraft, Lockheed and Texas Corporation.

Oils were favored in the curb, with Humble, Pantepec and Creole lively on the upswing. Losers included Cessna Aircraft, Brewster Aero and American Cyanamid "B." Turnover here was around 130,000 shares against 225,000 Thursday.

Medium-Price Rail Bonds Record Gain

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 26.—A selected group of medium priced railroad bonds scored gains of fractions to around a point today in contrast with narrow, sidewise movements for the list as a whole.

Trading contracted to $5,371,000, par value, from $7,126,250 on Thursday when the rails, along with some other groups, were under moderate selling pressue attributed in some quarters to uneasiness aroused by current Federal tax discussions at Washington.

Among the better performers were Wabash first 5s at 68⅝, Nickel Plate 4½s at 57½, Central Railroad of New Jersey 5s at 18, Erie convertible 4½ at 55½, Missouri-Kansas-Texas first 4s at 30⅞ and International Telephone 5s at 49¾.

Holding unchanged or lagging behind for small losses were, among others, Walworth 4s, Northern Pacific 4s, Montana Power 3¾s, International Mercantile Marine 6s, American & Foreign Power 5s and Laclede Gas 5½s.

Japanese issues recouped part of Thursday's losses and light demand lifted some British Empire loans, especially Canadian 3s and 4s, a point or so. Denmark 5½s gained 6½ points to 52 on sale of two bonds.

United States governments were quiet but followed an even course on both the stock exchange and over the counter.

Montgomery Ward Files 2 Millions in Claims

Chicago, Sept. 26 (AP).—Montgomery Ward & Co. has filed claims approximating two million dollars against 100 transportation agencies, the company announced today. S. S. Ball, secretary, said the claims were filed directly with the agencies and were preliminary to prosecution of suits in court. The claims themselves do not constitute legal suits, the company emphasized.

The claims are an outgrowth of strikes last winter at the company's branches in Oakland, Calif., and Portland, Oreg. Montgomery Ward says various intercoastal steamship lines, railroads and motor truckers refused to bring freight to the company's warehouses during the strike.

V.-C. Chemical Reelects Directors

Richmond, Va., Sept. 26 (AP).—Stockholders of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Corporation reelected the board of directors at the annual meeting today and adopted a by-law providing for the indemnification of directors and officers against claims arising by reason of their positions, except in cases of neglect or misconduct.

Bank Loans Increase

The Federal Reserve Board reports that New York banks increased their commercial, industrial and agricultural loans fifteen million dollars to a total of $2,450,000,000 in the week ended September 24, while Chicago banks boosted similar loans three million dollars to a total of $675,000,00.

Washington Gas Revenues Show Increase

The report of the Washington Gas Light Co. for August, 1941, filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday, shows operating revenues of $514,801, a gain of $49,987 over August last year.

Operating expenses increased $43,278 over last year to a total of $520,252. Nonoperating income was $15,324 higher, amounting to $34,910, and income deductions show an increases of $1,719 for the month. The final result of operations for August was a seasonal loss of $37,820, compared with a loss of $58,134 for August last year.

The company's net income for the first eight months of this year amounted to $996,882, which is only $573 under last year's net for the same period, although provision for taxes increased $166,580.

The report also shows gas sales of 743,684 M cubic feet for the month compared with 643,655 M cubic feet for August last year. There were 172,211 meters in service in the District on August 31, an increase of 7 per cent over last year.

The company expended approximately $183,000 in August and $1,094,000 in the first eight months of this year for extensions to its property in Washington.

U. S. Wheat Supply Is 1,344,000,000 Bushels, a Record

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that a record supply of 1,344,000,000 bushels of wheat was available in the United States for the marketing year that began on July 1.

The department said that this was 246 million bushels larger than the supply a year ago and 100 million above the previous record high in 1931. Government authorities estimated that the carry-over of old wheat stocks next July 1 may total 650 million bushels or 280 million bushels above the supply of 367 million bushels on July 1.

Despite the record supplies, the department said wheat prices advanced sharply during the month with September 9 prices at the highest levels since the summer of 1937. The price advances were said to reflect active buying of cash wheat and futures.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 26 (AP).—Higher grain prices today reflected buying of dealers who sold short recently, purchases of mills and other processors, though not extensive, and a market background based on bullish implications of wartime inflation and the crop loan and lend-lease programs.

This is one of a series of illustrated articles designed to inform the public of the progress being made by American industry in providing the weapons for national defense.

"Beating plowshares into swords" might well be the theme for the remarkable defense work being turned out by a manufacturer of farm implements.

When defense production was getting really under way last fall, this firm tackled the job of how it could convert its great facilities to the production of armaments or otherwise participate in the defense program. A shell production department was set up, and only two months after the first order from the Army was placed, 75 mm. shells were being run off a newly built conveyor system.

How this was accomplished is a truly remarkable story. Faced with the prospect of having to wait at least six months for the machine tools necessary to get into shell production, the technical experts on the companys' staff sought to find alternative routes. What they finally did was to go to their own discarded and obsolete machines—the so-called "junk pile"—and reclaim whatever looked in the least adaptable to the new job.

And today, right down the shell production line, one old machine after another in this plant is doing first-class work. Most of the jigs, cams, cross slides, gauges, tool blocks, lathes and fixtures were either rebuilt or newly made right in the shop. The bulk of the machine tools, including all turning equipment, was rebuilt from units salvaged from the old storage yards.

An example: One of the big problems that had to be solved before getting into production was how best to plan and lay out the shell-centering operation without waiting for a specially built unit from the hard-pressed machine tool industry. What the engineers and production experts finally did was to construct two centering machines by taking two old engine lathes from the scrap pile and equipping them with air-draulic cylinders, then mounting centering units in conjunction with the cylinders on the lathe beds. It has proved highly satisfactory, and the cost was only about one-tenth of that of a new unit.

Numerous other money-saving and time-saving ideas were put into effect, as a result of which this firm today—after having got into production six months early—is turning out high quality shells six days ahead of its own revised schedule.

Textile Operations

The textile industry for some time has been enjoying one of its infrequent periods of boom operations. Indications are that this situation will continue for some time ahead, under the impetus of Government orders for defense purposes and the high rate of civilian demand for all textile products. A new high record for production will be set this year by the cotton, wool, and rayon goods producers. Makers of silk goods have been hard hit by the embargo on raw silk imports from Japan and the commandeering of raw silk supplies for Government defense purposes. Until the dislocations caused by lack of silk are ironed out, producers in this division will obviously be prevented from sharing in the records being set by other operators in the industry.

Browns Split With Indians; Feller Victor

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept 26.—Bobby Feller gave Cleveland a chance to finish in a tie for third place today by pitching a one-hit victory over the St. Louis Browns, 3 to 2, in the nightcap of a double-header after the Indians had lost the first game in 11 innings, 6 to 5.

If Chicago and Detroit divide their remaining two games, Cleveland, now in fifth place, can tie both by beating the Browns in the two contests winding up the season.

Feller was off his strikeout form, getting only six, and he was wild, passing seven. A walk, the lone hit, a single by Rick Ferrell, two more walks and an outfield fly gave the Browns two runs in the 5th inning.

The Indians tied the score in the sixth on Lou Boudreau's double. Henry Edwards' triple and Jeff Heath's outfield fly, and beat Denny Galehouse in the seventh on a single by Gene Desautels, a double by Feller and a single by Boudreau.

It was Feller's twenty-fifth victory against 13 defeats.

Two runs behind in the ninth inning of the opening game, the Browns rallied to tie on Johnny Berardino's single, Glen McQuillen's triple and Ferrell's single, knocking Al Milnar out of the box.

Leo Walper Captures Golf Open Crown

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 26.—"Happy Go Lucky" Leo Walper, Washington driving range professional, became the 1941 champion in the Baltimore match play Open golf tournament at Green Spring Valley Hunt Club today by beating the 1940 champion, Andy Gibson, of Bonnie View, 4 and 3, in the 36-hole finals.

Wisecracking and shooting his way out of more trouble than any two golfers should get into, the Washingtonian took an early lead over the wee Scott and during the morning round produced near-miracle shots every time Andy looked as if he were about to rally.

At the end of the first 18, Leo was four up.

The little Scott fought back in the afternoon, but just did not seem to get any breaks. He got a hole back on the nineteenth and then lost it right back when Walper sank a 15-foot putt on the next one.

They exchanged wins to the twenty-seventh, where Andy began to have bad luck with his putter and soon was five down to the easy-going Walper. Walper was coming out of traps and all manner of bad lies so close to the pin that he had Andy pressing to drop long ones.

Gibson made one more try at the thirty-second hole when he sank a 10-footer for a birdie after Walper had put his second out of the rough to within 3 feet of the pin. This cut Walper's lead to four, but the best Andy could do on the thirty-third was a half, and the match was over.

Vander Meer Checks Bucs, Reds Win, 4-3

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 26.—Johnny Vander Meer chalked up seven strikeouts today to push his season's total to 202 as Cincinnati downed Pittsburgh, 4 to 3, before a meager 717 fans.

The Pirates touched Vander Meer for nine hits but the bingles were well scattered and Pirates did not fare well on the bases. Bill Brandt hurled five creditable innings, then gave three runs and four hits.

Mike McCormick's triple, a walk, a fly and Mattick's single gave the Reds two runs in the second and they added another in the third on Frey's infield hit and West's triple. The winning run crossed the plate in the seventh on two walks and an error by Rip Collins.

Yanks to Get Battle From Flock—Leo

ers. They won the pennant for me and they're entitled to pitch in the Series. We didn't win it with Albosta, or French, or Drake."

The same reasoning prompted Durocher to declare that he would adhere to Cookie Lavagetto at third base and Joe Medwick in leftfield, no matter whether the Yanks used right or lefthanded pitchers. During the heat of the pennant race he regularly installed Lew Riggs at third against righthanded pitchers and used Jim Wasdell in the outfield against southpaws.

Peewee Reese also will start all the games at shortstop, he said. "I don't expect to play unless I have to. Of course, if I have to put in a pinchhitter for Reese during a game, I'll have to go out there. But they didn't win with me at short, they won with the kid."

Durocher said he expected Reese to be nervous and to make mistakes in the series. "After all he's a high strung kid. He's only been in the big leagues two years and here he is in the World Series. But I think he'll settle down after the first strain wears off.

"Reiser may be a little nervous at the start, too. I watched him in the all-star game and he was on edge there. But that all-star game was a great thing for him. Maybe it taught him to ease off the pressure.

"One thing I know. When he's up there at bat he doesn't know who's pitchin'. He just looks at that ball and lets loose.

"I'm not worried about Camilli, or Medwick, or Herman tightening up. They're old hands. And that Owen—he's a tough little nut and he won't crack either."

Durocher revealed for the first time that his peppy catcher had been playing on his nerve in recent days.

"He'll be all right for the Series, but he hurt his left leg bad at St. Louis—skun it clear to the bone and then a boil came out right where it was hurt."

He added that he would use his regulars for a couple of times at bat both tomorrow and Sunday against the Phillies, just to keep them limbered up.

Weak-Hitting Nats Lose Two To Yankees

party to a new major league record established today. By hitting into three double plays during the twin bill they lifted the Yankees double-play record for the season to 189, two better than the former record.

In that first game, the Nats were tied up a 1-1 with the Yankees until the seventh inning when Chase flunked his control by walking Selkirk with one out and wild-pitching him to second. Priddy's single to center fetched Selkirk home with what proved to be the winning run. In the eighth, the Yankees came up with two more when Rolfe walked and Henrich and DiMaggio followed with singles.

The Nats muffed a chance for a big inning against Chandler when they scored only one run in the fourth. Layne singled and Travis doubled before anybody was out. Layne was forced to hold third as Vernon grounded out and the upshot was one run scored on Buddy Lewis' infield out.

In the sixth the Nats came up with nothing despite the fact Cramer and Layne led off by drawing walks. With the count three and two on Travis, that young man fouled off three pitches and then fanned, and Cramer was doubled up at third on the strike-out pitch.

Wynn was showing the Yankees a sweet mixture of fast and curve ball pitching in the second game, but Rizzuto's cheapish first inning homer licked him. Wynn didn't walk a batter. Of course, another factor in the Nat's defeat was Russo's 3-hit pitching.

Travis got one of the three hits off Russo when he led off the second inning with a single to left. Whereupon Vernon popped out and Ortiz hit into a double play. Evans singled to right center with one out in the third and Wynn obliged the Yanks by hitting into a D. P., the only other Washington blow being Ortiz's scratch hit to Rizzuto in the seventh.

Wynn was pretty potent, especially in the eighth when with men on second and third and two out he purposely passed Joe DiMaggio and struck out Selkirk. But the Nats got no runs for the lad.

Chevy Chase Show Features, 3-Year-Olds

An unscheduled and completely unexpected meeting among three of Virginia's best 3-year-olds will take place tomorrow in the second session of the Chevy Chase Horse Show on the East-West Highway grounds opposite the Meadowbrook Saddle Club. Junior events will be held today.

The trio, made up of Mrs. E. Douglas Prime's newly purchased Pappy, Mrs. James Hamilton's Pedestal and Betty Couzens' Spanish Oak, has been competing all summer on the Virginia circuit, but no show followers figured that its members would have an opportunity to further settle the issue on Maryland territory.

Pappy, winner of the Warrenton juvenile title for J. North Fletcher, naturally is highest touted in early figuring, but railbangers know of the tremendous jumping ability of Spanish Oak and the attractive way of going of Mrs. Hamilton's colt.

So, while these youngsters battle it out among themselves over 3½-foot fences, older and more experienced local campaigners will go after the coveted conformation hunter title. Leading candidates include Charles Carrico's Recall, Miss Couzens' Repulsion and Jag, Patricia Henry's Gabby's Scamp, Mrs. Nancy Harris McDowell's Dunstar, W. Frank Burrows' Tahra and U. S. Randle's string of hunters.

Today's classes, limited to junior riders under 10, will begin at 12:30 p. m. Sunday's full card opens at 11 a. m. with a class for road hacks and continues through the afternoon.

Eastern Game At Episcopal Tops Schedule

Highlighted by Eastern High's invasion of Episcopal, at Alexandria, the high school football card today calls for a total of four games, all out of town.

Anacostia opens its schedule at Martinsburg (W. Va.) High, Woodrow Wilson gets under way at Randolph-Macon Academy in Front Royal, Va., and the first Calvin Coolidge High eleven in the school's history tangles with Handley High, at Winchester, Va.

Going into the Episcopal battle, the White Tide boasts one of the pre-season favorites in local interhigh circles. A strong line and a backfield composed mostly of Herby Adams and Neil Craig is its talking point. Episcopal, under Coach Bus Male, will have six lettermen from the 1940 club which lost all its games.

Anacostia enters its first battle with a light team but numerous experienced players headed by Bob Nolte, 170-pound triple-threat at Wilson. Even Coach Carl Heintel can't say what kind of a club he will have, largely because of scholastic difficulties. A strong Tiger team, however, isn't too much to expect.

Coolidge, taking Anacostia's place as the "baby" of the public school family, goes into its first season under Coaches Sherman Rees and Gil Roberts as an unknown quantity. The line will average about 160 pounds, hover, and the backfield about 150.

Listen! with Glynn

To those two drugstore cowboys, Announcers Hugh Conover and Gunnar Back, there is one program that shines like a gem of purest ray serene. It's the Farm Market Reports, heard weekdays at 6:30 a. m. over WJSV.

The feature, aside from its great value to the farmer, has been a fresh air encyclopedia for Messrs. Conover and Back, who take turns reading it in the early morning haze of Studio 1. For example, digging into a veal cutlet at home, Conover now might justifiably ask whether its origin was a "common vealer or a light cull," both of which he knows were firm during the week. G. Back, before he wrecks an omelet, might conceivably worry over whether it was made of brown eggs (always 2 cents under), mixed color ungraded eggs, or just eggs.

Any day of the week, packing sows, farrows, and gilts are likely to go a dime under, something these lads never worried about before.

And there's more truth than broadcasting to the familiar phrase they often encounter there in Studio 1 by dawn's early light: "Onions held strong during the week."

Mary Churchill, 18, Is Private in ATS

MARY CHURCHILL

Premier's Daughter To Study Control Of Antiaircraft Fire

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 26.—The war office announced that Mary Churchill, youngest daughter of the prime minister, has become a private in the Woman's Auxiliary Territorial Service.

Mary Churchill, 18, last May 15 was reported engaged to marry Lord Duncannon, 28-year-old son of the Earl of Bessborough, who is a captain, aide de camp to Lieut. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton of the Canadian Corps.

At that time the report was authoritatively described as "a little premature."

Today's announcement said Mrs. Churchill had given Mary every encouragement to join the ATS and "Private Churchill is at present in training with her friend, Miss Judith Montague, whose mother is a cousin of Mrs. Churchill, at the ATS reception depot in the southern command.

"Miss Churchill now has passed her preliminary selection test for antiaircraft work and will shortly be posted to a mixed battery for technical training in the operation of antiaircraft fire, control instruments."
